U. S. Is Preparing to Act in Far Eastern Crisis; Lends China 25 Million; Japan Embargo Likely; Big Ships Struck, British Withdraw From Dakar

English Disclaim Ever Intending To Make War On Petain Forces

By Raymond Daniell

London, Sept. 25.—The British have given up their attempt to take Dakar rather than "enter serious warlike operations against Frenchmen who felt it their duty to obey the commands of the Vichy government," it was officially stated tonight.

A ministry of information communique disclosed the tragi-comedy of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's abortive effort to establish himself on French soil as the leader of "free" Frenchmen.

The net result of this expedition, which was backed by a strong British naval force, was to add further to the confusion and increase the strain on relations between this country and what remains of France, its former ally. Dakar remains under the control of the Vichy government and is easy pickings for any totalitarian power which decides to take it.

Both Sides Suffer

Before it was decided to withdraw, the British naval vessels exchanged shells with Dakar's shore batteries and defending warships, and hits were scored and casualties suffered on both sides. Two of three French submarines which put to sea were sunk, although the crew of one of them was rescued.

[The Vichy government, which apparently had not received confirmation of the British withdrawal, reported late Tuesday that the fighting was continuing, with British guns and planes pounding the French West Africa capital heavily.

[The French admitted the loss of one submarine, the Persee, but reported a torpedo hit on the British cruiser Kent and direct shell hits on the battleships Barham and Resolution. Dakar's casualties were put at 65 civilians and 120 soldiers killed, and 225 civilians and 138 soldiers injured.]

French Bomb 'Rock' Again

By the Associated Press

Gibraltar (Thursday), Sept. 26.—The command of this mighty British fortress, world symbol of impregnability, announced today that "large numbers" of French planes bombed the Rock Wednesday for 2½ hours. More than 300 bombs were dropped by about 100 planes, the authorities stated.

It was the second successive heavy assault by the French on this famous outpost of their erstwhile allies.

The announcement said "a large proportion of bombs dropped into the sea and on barren parts of the Rock, but many fell on buildings, roads and old defenses.

"Considerable damage was done to private property and government properties, but little damage to military works and personnel.

"One small ship was hit and subsequently sank in the harbor.

"There were a number of casualties, including some fatal ones.

"The fortress antiaircraft guns were very effective throughout. The gunners stood up to the heavy

Judge Frees Seer Who Sees His Troubles

A none too rosy horoscope of Judge Hobart Newman, her trial judge, won freedom for Miss Jane C. Bartleman, 34, of 1800 Connecticut avenue northwest, in Police Court yesterday.

Judge Newman

Although she saw in the chart troubles "almost heart breaking" for the jurist, Miss Bartleman apparently convinced the judge that astrology, her hobby, is a science and not mere fortune telling.

For at the conclusion of her testimony, Judge Newman snapped: "Anyone who can practice astrology that well doesn't need to tell fortunes. Case dismissed."

Miss Bartleman

Charged with being an unlicensed fortune teller, the defendant took the stand in her own defense after listening to testimony of two policewomen that they paid her $2 to prepare their horoscopes.

She denied that she was a fortune teller and outlined the principles

The Burden Grew Too Great . . .

New York, Sept. 25 (INS).—The story of Donald O'Reilly, 31-year-old mechanic, who killed himself and his two sons Tuesday after losing a job he held 11 years, tugged at many a heart string. But to one man it was more than a tragic incident—it was a burden he could not bear.

That man—one of O'Reilly's superiors—brooded a night and a morning. He told business associates he felt responsible for O'Reilly's discharge—and death—because of a report he had made on O'Reilly's work. He pushed aside all consoling friends and ended his misery by committing suicide this afternoon.

He was Robert Fletcher Sadler, 40, a salesman for the International Business Machine Co.

Like O'Reilly, whom he had known for ten years he was employed in that concern, he too had a wife and two children and a happy home.

An official of the firm that employed both men said that a few days after Sadler turned in a report on an installation O'Reilly had made at the U. S. Army base in Brooklyn, O'Reilly was discharged.

Tuesday morning, in a shady grove along the Bronx River, O'Reilly and his sons, Donald, jr., 8, and James, 7, were found dead.

Today Sadler wrove onto Manhattan Bridge and stopped his new car. Hurriedly he peeled off his jacket and vest, dashed to the rail and jumped into the East River.

Tigers Tighten Pennant Grasp

After yesterday's games, Detroit's Tigers were more firmly entrenched in first place—two full games ahead of Cleveland and three and one-half games in front of the New York Yankees.

NEWSOM

The Tigers' gain was through a double defeat administered to the Chicago White Sox, who went down fighting, 10 to 9, in ten innings, and 3 to 2 in a regulation-length game. Principal laurels went to Buck Newsom, who got credit for winning bothg ames.

The Indians remained in the race by beating the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 2, behind Al Milnar's pitching. But they must win all of their remaining three games with Detroit to win the pennant.

Nazis Step Up Air War; London Has Heaviest Raid in 10 Days

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Sept. 26. German night raiders, resorting to new tactics of speed and higher flying, loosed fresh cargoes of destruction on London tonight after a day of attacks in which they sent over the biggest daytime bomber formations seen since September 15.

The Germans darted about the outskirts until they found an opening in London's defenses, then sped across the metropolis, tossing off their bombs. Their changed tactics apparently resulted from a new device the British themselves tried for the first time—a searchlight defense featuring bright beams thrown at right angles to cover every foot of the skies in the assault area.

As this nineteenth successive night of air siege wore on, activity in central London slackened but in the western section the antiaircraft guns sent up a heavy barrage against Germans whose bombs barely missed a big apartment block.

26 Raiders Shot down

An early morning air ministry communique said 26 German planes were destroyed in yesterday's air battles, 22 by fighters and four by antiaircraft. Four British planes, but only one pilot, were lost.

The Nazis, attempting to outflank a heavy counter antiaircraft barrage, flew north and south above the city. The noise of their bombs rose occasionally above the ground fire.

Much of their attack was concentrated in a northwestern area, where flaming incendiary bombs were dropped. (The great Hendon military airdrome is in that general area.)

Northwest Coast Raked

For hours there was scarcely a break in the antiaircraft fire above central London and high explosive and incendiary bombs fell steadily.

Now and then a raider dropped a flare, thus lighting up the target for following planes.

At the same time, the northwest coastal district was undergoing its 121st raid since the outbreak of war.

British Bomb Berlin 5 Hours

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 26.—British bombers lashed at Berlin's outskirts last night and today for five hours in the city's longest air raid, which started before bedtime and forced many a home-bound Berliner to spend the night in a strange, chilly cellar.

Most of the raiders appeared to stay over Berlin's industrial suburbs, but two waves of them passed over the city, and central Berlin antiaircraft cannon blazed away on both occasions.

No bombs were heard bursting in the center of the city, and from that point no fires could be seen.

Authorities issued a statement charging the British with "aimless" bombing of residential sections, destroying a number of houses.

Rep. McCormack Is Elected Majority Leader of House

JOHN McCORMACK

Defeats Woodrum, 141-67; Democrats Almost Defer Voting

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, South Boston's "fighting Irishman" and pre-Chicago third-term supporter, yesterday was elected majority leader of the House.

McCormack was chosen over Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, by a vote of 141 to 67, after House Democrats in caucus narrowly defeated a motion to postpone the election.

All other candidates in the leadership contest except Woodrum dropped out after the postponement failed, 108 to 91, and McCormack, who had led from the start in pledges from all sections, won hands down.

On motion of Woodrum, the choice was made unanimous and the caucus closed in a demonstration of harmony. The independent-minded Virginian in acknowledging defeat called on the leadership to take a firmer stand with the Administration hereafter on important issues, to keep the White House fully advised of the will of House Democrats, and to build a strong legislative arm "for the trying four years

Called to Arms

President Roosevelt yesterday summoned 35,700 more National Guardsmen for a year of intensive Federal training, and at the same time received definite recommendations on location of defense bases to be set up in Newfoundland.

Man power of the Territories was called on for the first time, as the Chief Executive issued his orders for Guard officers and enlisted men from New York, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Mississippi, Puerto Rico and Hawaii to report October 15.

The orders brought to almost 100,000 the number of guardsmen already called into the extraordinary training program.

Units affected by yesterday's order included:

The Twenty-seventh Division, New York, less its tank company; the Thirty-seventh Division, Ohio, less tank company, and Companies F and I of the 112th Medical Regiment; the Thirty-second Division, less tank company, Michigan and Wisconsin; the 102d Observation Squadron, New York; the 153d Observation Squadron, Mississippi,

Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota made the prediction in introducing the nominee whose convention campaign he helped to direct.

Willkie brought cheers when he declared that if a country of 130,000,000 persons could produce only one man capable of directing the Nation, then "democracy has failed."

A.P. Man Tells How Bomb Brought War to Office Door

London, Sept. 24.—We are still doing busines. at the old stand.

The Associated Press London bureau at 20 Tudor street, felt the knuckles of war last night when a high-explosive bomb landed at our front door, damaged our building, demolished the office building opposite and started a fire which still was flaring fitfully in the entryway today when I reentered the office to write this.

Two other bombs fell within 20 yards.

Three and a half hours after the bomb fell and sent us scurrying to safety we were back in the office.

All departments are functioning.

Last night we all had kept saying, "We will have a sweet time tonight"—like boasting before going to the dentist. Up to then the bombing had been "just usual."

The office was working smoothly in the basement. English-born Staffsman G. H. P. Anderson was up on the roof getting eye-witness dope on German air raiders.

Staffer Edwin Stout was handling copy. Three office boys slept under

Airport Ceremony Set for Saturday

Civil Aeronautics officials yesterday spotted a silver lining in the storm clouds which forced a second postponement of President Roosevelt's appearance at the new Washington National Airport for the terminal building cornerstone ceremonies.

With the ceremony now set for 2:30 p. m. Saturday, a C. A. A. spokesman said the grounds will be "just that much further along" toward completion than if the event had taken place yesterday. A larger crowd should turn out on a Saturday than on a weekday, he added.

Japanese Have Halted Attack On Indo-China, Vichy Reports

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Sept. 25.—The French colonial ministry said tonight that Japanese troops in Indo-China who have been trying to fight their way across the Kwangsi (Chinese) border had ceased firing on French forces and had retired across the frontier.

A communique said Gen. Issaku Nishirara, head of the Japanese military mission at Hanoi, apparently had gained control of the troops after interceding with the Japanese general staff and demanding cessation of the fighting.

It was Nishihara who negotiated the accord between France and Japan under which the Vichy government agreed to "limited" Japanese military facilities in Indo-China. According to government circles here, the Japanese invasion across the South Chinese border was in direct contradiction to orders sent from Tokyo.

Tokyo (Thursday), Sept. 25.—Domei, official Japanese news agency, in a dispatch today from the "South China Front," quotes Japanese authorities as saying that in addition to the troops which began advancing into Indo-China on September 23, "we also decided to send certain Japanese units into Indo-China at Haiphong today."

Hanoi Reports Fighting

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Sept. 25 (AP).—A French communique said tonight that French troops had withdrawn today from Langson, 80 miles northeast of Hanoi and 15 miles within the Indo-China border, after having been encircled by "vastly superior Japanese forces."

Both sides said the French suffered "considerable" losses during the Langson fighting.

Informed unofficial quarters asserted that a combination of diplomatic, political and military factors had caused the French to fall back from the border after vigorous resistance to the initial Japanese move of Sunday night.

Some leading New Dealers, like Majority Whip Minton, of Indiana, and Senator Hill, of Alabama, joined forces with the bulk of the Republicans on a ballot that had the effect of keeping the exemptions in the bill. The tally was 36 to 30, with Majority Leader Barkley on the losing side.

Mussolini Reported Seeking French Military Centers in Near East

Cairo, Sept. 25.—Premier Mussolini was reported tonight to have demanded that French naval bases, airdromes and military centers in Lebanon and Syria be turned over to Italy.

The news agency Orient Arabe reported from Beirut, where an armistice commission is meeting, that 11 Italian demands had been laid down, several of which would strengthen greatly Italy's military position in the Near East and eastern Mediterranean.

Shanghai Hears Of American Plan to Bring Nationals Home

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

The United States last night announced a new $25,000,000 loan to Japanese-invaded China, and prepared to take definite steps today or tomorrow to bulwark this country's deep interest in maintenance of the status quo in the Far East.

Clamping of an embargo on scrap iron and perhaps other American materials critically needed by Japan in her spreading drive to dominate Asia was confidently forecast in well-informed circles. While such action long has been discussed as a possibility, it was generally conceded last night in official circles that, with Japan pressing her expansion through military action against French Indo-China, the time has arrived for this country to take some action.

The United States paved the way for such an embargo a year ago, when it gave the required six months notice of abrogation of the commercial treaty between Japan and this country, one clause of which specifically forbade such a trade restriction as now is contemplated.

U. S. Attitude Ignored

Repeated official denunciations by the American Government of the policy being followed by Japan toward her goal of a Japanese dominated "New Asia" have only been followed by new acts of aggression.

Contributing to the general picture of stiffening determination here were many factors:

It was made clear that French Indo-China has full access to any munitions she might find in this country not already contracted for or essential to this country's defense, with which to resist the Japanese invaders.

Plans for evacuation of some 11,000 Americans from Japan, China and Manchukuo in case of emergency were reported from Shanghai to be under consideration.

Officials in informal discussions plainy displayed resentment of Berlin, Sept. 25.—Japan and Spain were uppermost in discussions among political circles here today and it was learned unofficially the Japanese are being urged by Germany and Italy to form a counterweight to possible closer British-American collaboration.

(Trustworthy advices received by the Associated Press in New York said Japan is on the verge of telling the world whether she will enter an alliance with Germany and Italy. Whether such a pact would plunge Japan immediately into war with Britain was not made clear.)

That Spain already is about to form closer ties with the Axis powers has been foreshadowed for days by the German press. Adolf Hitler's audiences last night and again today with Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish minister of government, threw the spotlight anew on Generalissimo Franco's brother-in-law emissary.

In this connection, a usually well-informed source said Italian Foreign Minister Ciano, who conferred in

U. S. Makes Biggest Lumber Deal on Record—for Defense

Uncle Sam yesterday sold 425,000,000 feet of rough lumber salvaged from the 1938 New England hurricane with the expectation of buying a large part of it back for national defense construction. The value of the lumber is between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The deal—largest in United States history for rough lumber—was consummated at the Department of Agriculture with an initial payment of $25,000 from Harry Joseph, of Chicago, president of the Eastern Pine Corporation. Full payment will be made, officials explained, as the lumber is delivered.

For troop housing and other defense installations the Government in the next 12 months will consume, according to Defense Commission estimates, between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 feet of lumber.

Here's how the Forest Service, which handled the transaction with Joseph, explains why the Government, needing so much lumber, found it advantageous to sell that which it already had bought:

"To meet specific requirements, the defense agencies must be furnished lumber of specified grades and sizes. The salvage lumber has been or will be sawed, but has not been finished or remanufactured.

the French action in beating off the English at Dakar, thereby preserving for possible use a base from which Nazi penetration of South America might be carried on.

Reports of growing Nazi pressure on Japan to bring that country into closer cooperation with the Rome-Berlin Axis were read here with keen interest but without public official comment.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull gave increasing portions of their time to consideration of the intensified international problems, and it was anticipated that tomorrow's Cabinet meeting would see lengthy discussion of the various crises.

The loan to China, intended to help her "meet her present foreign exchange needs," will be liquidated through a United States purchase of $30,000,000 worth of tungsten as part of this country's defense program, it was announced by Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator.

A Strategic War Metal

The tungsten, to be added to America's stores of strategic war materials which must be imported, will be delivered over a period of years at prices to be agreed upon from time to time, in accordance with market conditions, Jones said. The National Resources Commission of China will make the sale to the Metals Reserve Co., recently set up by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The $25,000,000 loan will be made by the Export-Import Bank to the government of China with the guarantee of the Central Bank of China.

The loan brings to $70,000,000 the total advanced to China by this country in less than two years, Jones pointed out. On December 15, 1938, the Export-Import Bank authorized $25,000,000 credits, now being repaid through imporation from China of wood oil.

On March 7 of this year, additional loans of $20,000,000 were authorized and these are being repaid with tin, another defense metal for the United States. Of all loans heretofore authorized, $43,824,528 has been disbursed to China and $13,160,253 repaid, "with nothing past due."

Grew's Recall Rumored

The New York Times from Tokyo reported last night that the newspaper Miyako's Washington correspondent had sent word that United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew is likely to be recalled" as a prelude to the new Far Eastern policy the United States is adopting."

Here, however, Secretary Hull told the Times that the Ambassador's recall had not even been discussed.

With interest now centering on the Japanese onslaught against that French possession, efforts of an Indo-China mission, headed by Col. H. Jacomy, to purchase airplanes and other war supplies here have come into prominent notice. While the mission was assured of a general desire here to be helpful in the effort to repel Tokyo's invasion attempt, the members were reported to have had difficulty in locating materials immediately available. Airplane factories all have backlogs of unfilled orders, and surplus munitions of other types were found to be scarce.

Hull Conferences Recalled

Of interest in connection with anticipation of important developments was recollection that Secretary Hull, in very recent conferences with Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, and Australian Minister Richard Casey has gone over the entire field of international developments with particular reference to the situation in the Pacific.

Syrians Dislike Italians

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 25.—From the political viewpoint the situation in Syria becomes more confused daily.

It appears public opinion is divided on all but two things: Hatred of Italians and a desire for complete independence for their country. German propaganda may have influenced a few but by far the largest number, especially in Lebanon, favor Britain.

As for the French army in Syria, the largest number of the rank and file, as well as officers, side with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, but a few of the highest officers favor the Vichy government. Any effort by the soldiers to place themselves under British command would be foiled by the French high command in Syria.

"Several enemy aircraft were shot down, three for certain and two more possibly."

2 Powder Magazines Go Up in Flames

Watchers in La Linea, Spain, opposite Gibraltar, said the waves of French planes were so swift and so numerous that they defied counting.

Two powder magazines exploded, and flashes leaped high from the naval base installations.

Observers said an armed British trawler was sunk by a direct hit. Workers reaching La Linea from Gibraltar reported the gas plant was set afire by two bombs, a building next to the governor's palace was wrecked, and streets in front of the palace flooded by water from broken mains. One bomb was said to have scored a direct hit on an antiaircraft battery.

These workers said bombs fell in parts of the town of Gibraltar, as distinguished from the fortress, and that casualties were "heavy."

Smoke billowed up from the vicinity of the arsenal and the town itself, and still the planes came over, flying high as the antiaircraft guns on land and the "pompoms" on warships in the harbor threw up showers of bursting shells. (A French communique said Britain's 32,000-ton battle cruiser Renown was hit and forced to steam away.)

The attack opened at 2:40 p. m. (9:40 a. m., E. S. T.) with the attacking planes coming in groups of four.

Forthy-five minutes later 14 planes droned across the narrow Strait of Gibraltar from Morocco and unloosed clusters of bombs. Some fell near the arsenal, some in the streets, others near the warships and the docks. At 3:50 several buildings were on fire and by 4:15 p. m. the attackers were so numerous and moving so swiftly that observers could not count them.

The bombardment ended at 4:45 p. m.

While Tuesday's bombers kept pretty high as they came over the Rock, attackers repeatedly dived over their targets yesterday before releasing their loads.

The people of La Linea and Algeciras saw flame and smoke spread over the whole Rock, from the palace of the military governor to Point Europa.

Vichy denied "in the most categorical manner the presence of any German elements, military or civilian, in French West Africa."]

Hostility to French Denied

British officials were at pains to point out that the warships sent to Dakar to protect Gen. de Gaulle's expedition were intended to protect him from German and Italian attack, not to make war on Frenchmen. They returned the fire from French ships and shore batteries only after they had been attacked, it was said. Judging from the communique, a masterpiece of naivete, the whole expedition was a sad mistake.

De Gaulle, it said, had been led to believe that a major proportion of the French population of Senegal would greet him with open arms. He managed to convince British officials, apparently, that if he could go to Dakar with a show of strength he would precipitate a situation like that in Equatorial Africa, which recently declared its allegiance to him.

An expedition was prepared, containing some ships of what formerly was the French navy, supported by strong units of the Royal Navy. While it was sailing to Dakar, the Vichy government dispatched three cruisers from Toulon. These were allowed to sail past the British guns at Gibraltar because "it is no part of the policy of the government to interfere with movements of French men-of-war so long as they are not destined for any ports under German control."

The French warships reached Dakar without interference, the statement said. Later, however, when they put to sea, steaming south, British naval ships intercepted them and forced them back to Dakar for fear they might be intending to cause trouble in Equatorial Africa.

Truce Party Fired On

It was on September 23 when the expedition faced the crisis. Gen. de Gaulle and a party made for shore flying the tricolor and a white flag of truce. Before they set foot ashore they were fired upon and some of the party were seriously wounded. Shore batteries opened fire on one of De Gaulle's warships and, according to the official statement, "on His Majesty's ships which were standing by in order to render De Gaulle support and assistance if needed."

The ministry of information said the British admiral commanding made the following signal: "We will be compelled to return fire unless fire ceases."

When this signal went unheeded, British ships fired on shore batteries and the Petain government's warships. The French battleship Richelieu, damaged by British action a few weeks ago, joined in the defense of Dakar, crippled though she was.

The official statement said it then became apparent that "only a major operation of war" would effect the capitulation of Dakar. Therefore, it was decided to discontinue hostilities. The statement added:

"De Gaulle himself was most anxious that he should not be the cause of bloodshed of his fellow countrymen. The force concerned, therefore, is now being withdrawn from the region of Dakar."

2 British Ships Feared Torpedoed

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Mackay Radio said tonight it had intercepted a radio report that the 6,800-ton British steamship Corrientes had been torpedoed at 7:40 p. m. (E. S. T.). About 800 miles due west of the Irish coast.

Mackay reported earlier the 5,802-ton British steamer Sulairia messaged she had been torpedoed early today about 475 miles due west of Ireland. There was no details given.

a German commission is also expected to arrive in Syria soon to help the Italians.]

The demands of the Italians as stated by the agency, were:

1. Demobilization of the French Syrian and Lebanon armed forces, particularly those known for their opposition to the Petain regime at Vichy.
2. Maintenance of an adequate armed force to guard public security and the Syrian-Lebanon and Palestine-Iraq-Turkish frontiers to prevent French officers and soldiers from going over to the British or "free French" forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.
3. Repatriation of demobilized French forces, with a French guarantee that they will not escape while en route.
4. Delivery to Italy of all airdromes and military and naval bases.
5. Repatriation to France of officers known to be hostile toward Germany and Italy.
6. Acceptance of an Italian commission to control administration and censorship.
7. Adoption of measures to prevent persons hostile to Italy and Germany from taking any action.
8. Prohibition of travel between Syria and Lebanon as well as other countries without special permit from the armistice commission.
9. Prohibition of the sale of the Arabic press and a ban against listening to any radio stations except those of Germany and Italy, under heavy penalties.
10. Italian control of production and provisional commerce in the near eastern territories.
11. The handing over to the Italian armistice commission of all munitions, provisions and gasoline held by the French army.

Syrians Dislike Italians

Copyright by New York Times

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 25.—From the political viewpoint the situation in Syria becomes more confused daily.

It appears public opinion is divided on all but two things: Hatred of Italians and a desire for complete independence for their country. German propaganda may have influenced a few but by far the largest number, especially in Lebanon, favor Britain.

As for the French army in Syria, the largest number of the rank and file, as well as officers, side with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, but a few of the highest officers favor the Vichy government. Any effort by the soldiers to place themselves under British command would be foiled by the French high command in Syria.

Funeral Today For M. C. Oliver

Six classmates will act as pallbearers today at funeral services for Marcel Casavant Oliver, 18, who died Tuesday night in Doctors' Hospital after a short illness.

A student at Georgetown Preparatory School, young Oliver was the son of Maj. and Mrs. Fred M. Oliver, of 4 Laurel Parkway, Chevy Chase, Md.

Besides his parents he leaves a sister, Marie Oliver, of Washington, and a brother, Fred Oliver, jr., of Texas. Funeral services will be held in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, 5839 Chevy Chase Parkway northwest, at 11 a. m. Burial will be in St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, Canada.

Inquiry to Study Party Bookkeeping

Treasurers of Both To Be Called to Hatch Act Probe

Treasurers of both the Democratic and Republican National committees will be called before the Senate Campaign Expenditures committee to explain bookkeeping methods they use in Hatch Act compliance, it was learned last night.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the committee, said he wants to know whether methods of collections and disbursements of the two campaign groups lend themselves to violation of the $3,000,000 Hatch limitation.

Gillette called a meeting for this morning to ask his committee to summon the two party treasurers. The Iowa Senator said there were no specific complaints, but he "understood" the Republican committee had used $639,000 of current receipts to pay off debts owed from the 1936 campaign. He said he would ask his committee if this should be charged against current year Hatch Act limits on receipts and disbursements.

Gillette, who called on the President yesterday, said the committee has not yet passed judgment on the request of Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin for Hatch Act clarification on who pays the costs of the President's trips.

Members Reading Speech

Gillette last week asked members of his committee to read the President's speech at Chickamauga dam to determine whether it is "political," as charged by Martin. He said he will ask them today if they are ready to report. Personally, he said he found it hard to say whether speeches the President might make in the line of his duties were political or not, although all might have a political effect.

Meantime the Republican National Committee charged that the Democratic National Committee "ignored the spirit" of the Hatch law by "shaking down" postmasters for campaign contributions. Of 65 individuals who made $100 contributions to the Democratic war chest in the last three months, the Republican committee charged more than half were postmasters.

Other developments:

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee that President Roosevelt had made the "weightiest contribution to the argument against a third term" by his own actions. He said that as "President-candidate" prior to Chicago, the President "contributed a perfect illustration of every danger and evil which Jefferson foresaw so clearly and against which he warned his countrymen so earnestly."

Villard Fears Dictatorship

Oswald Garrison Villard, former editor of The Nation, told the subcommittee studying limitation of White House tenure that unless the third term is rejected at the polls, "the road to dictatorship is open."

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, predicted New York in November will deliver the "biggest Republican majority the State has ever known." Barton charged that "Fifth avenue clubs and the Stock Exchange are the centers of Republican defeatism," but "the man in the street has not heard about any slump in the Willkie campaign."

Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial campaign committee, named four Senators to work with him—Wagner, of New York; Adams, of Colorado; Ellender, of Louisiana, and Clark of Iowa.

Chairman Martin, of the Republican National Committee, attacked Chairman Edward J. Flynn, of the Democratic National Committee, for saying that no one can solve the unemployment problem. Flynn's reply to Wendell Willkie's promise to provide jobs for all, Martin said, was a demonstration that "in the economic field the New Deal has been defeatist in its philosophy and reactionary in its policies."

Wallace Cites Farm Gains Since 1932

Program Can Be Called Your Own, Kansans Told by Candidate

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 25.—Henry A Wallace, returning to the scene of President Roosevelt's agriculture speech in the 1932 campaign and directing his address to farmers, tonight said "you now have a national farm program you can call your own."

"In the operation of that program," added the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, "you have the sympathetic and understanding help of a friendly President, a friendly Department of Agriculture, a friendly Congress, and a just Supreme Court."

The former Agriculture Secretary addressed a rally in Topeka's municipal auditorium, climaxing a strenuous day of speeches in Missouri, Iowa, and northeast Kansas. The talk was broadcast.

Recalling the collapse of the wartime boom of 20 years ago and the sharp drop in farm prices, Wallace said in his prepared speech:

"We remember how discouraged we were when these prices failed to rise again. We remember the heart-breaking struggle of thousands of farmers to pay off high-level debts out of low-level incomes.

"We remember how farmers organized and appealed for help from Washington, and the cold shoulder they got from the interests that ruled the Republican administrators then in power. For 12 disheartening years you hung on grimly, hoping against hope for a turn in the tide of your fortunes.

"Then in 1932, there was a voice of cheer—the voice of Franklin D. Roosevelt. You found in Roosevelt a man who understood you and your problems. You found a man with courage to balance up the scales in your behalf."

The nominee asserted that the Nation's farm cash income has risen from $4,700,000,000 in 1932 to around $9,000,000,000 in 1940.

"The truth is," he exclaimed, "that the ever normal granary program is working. Take the experience of corn and hog producers, for example.

"Without the corn loan, prices would have been less than 25 cents last year and hay prices would have been down to $3 this year. Hog supplies are being brought into line with markets by the corn loan and the corn acreage allotments, and the price of hogs on the farm in recent weeks has averaged nearly $7 a hundred.

"The corn loan assures cooperating farmers of a loan value on their corn which this fall . . . is likely to be 61 cents a bushel."

Antithird Term Posters Dot Roads In 37 States Today

New York, Sept. 25.—Ten thousand huge figures of Uncle Sam turning "thumbs down" on a third term dotted the main highways and main streets of 37 States today as the National Committee of Democrats-for-Willkie spanned the country with billboards that it estimates will be seen by 50,000,000 persons daily.

Mrs. Douglas

The billboards blossomed with a key unveiling in the heart of New York's Times Square, where Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, wife of the former budget director in the Roosevelt Administration and executive member of the National Committee of Democrats-for-Willkie group uncovered one of the 20-foot billboards. The poster was designed by Artist Howard Scott.

With the unveiling, national distribution was started on millions of reproductions of the poster, including stickers for automobiles, stamps for letters, lapel buttons, letterheads and posters for stores and homes.

Senator Green, of Rhode Island, new chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, announced yesterday that Senators Wagner, New York; Adams, Colorado; Ellender, Louisiana, and Clark, Idaho, had been chosen the other members of the committee.

The group will work for election of Democratic senatorial candidates in the November elections.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 25 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover will speak here October 9 in behalf of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, Republican State headquarters announced today. Hoover will discuss the third-term issue in what the headquarters said would be his only Ohio speaking engagement.

Willkie Invades Dakotas, Already Listed for Him

In both North Dakota and South Dakota, it was said by those who came aboard the campaign train, the "fresh water Democrats" are rallying to Willkie. They are the voters who deserted the Republican Party in 1932 to support Franklin D. Roosevelt, and who stuck to him in 1936.

These voters, political scouts say, are angry over the third-term issue and in many cases dissatisfied with the New Deal farm program, despite the vast sums that have been paid them in AAA checks.

North Dakota and South Dakota each has four electoral votes.

Almost a third of the voters in North Dakota are of German stock. A Fargo editor expressed the opinion that a large proportion of them will vote against Mr. Roosevelt.

Willkie found himself caught in a bitter G. O. P. row in a senatorial campaign and had to exercise all his powers of diplomacy until he left the State.

There are two pro-Willkie nominees for the United States Senate, former Governor William Langer, an old-time Non-Partisan Leaguer who is the regular Republican nominee, and Representative William Lemke, also a charter member of the Non-Partisan League, who is running as an "Independent Progressive Republican."

Langer, a former Governor of North Dakota, won the Republican nomination from Senator Lynn F. Frazier in the recent primary election. However, his victory was so repugnant to many members of the party, including Senator Gerald P. Nye, that Lemke was persuaded to give up his seat in the House and run against him.

Both on Train

Both Langer and Lemke boarded the Willkie train today and took turns introducing the Republican nominee for President. Langer introduced him to a crowd of 10,000 to 12,000 at Bismarck, and Lemke at Jamestown.

No matter how each lambasts the other from now on, both will call for support of Willkie.

In rear-platform talks today, Willkie hammered at President Roosevelt's growing assumption of power, the third term, and the New Deal effort to arouse class prejudice in the United States.

He also took a swipe at Thomas G. (White House Tommy) Corcoran after he had read that the young brain truster had resigned from his Federal job to work for a third term.

To a crowd at Miles City, Mont., Willkie said: "I see Tommy Corcoran is goin gout to organize support to reelect the President. That ought to elect me 100 per cent, with Tommy on the other side."

Willkie recalled at another stop that he had once washed dishes in a restaurant at Aberdeen, S. Dak., ultimately working his way up to the position of assistant cook. Then, after accusing President Roosevelt of posing as the "common man" and making him out to be an "aristocrat," Willkie said:

"Did you ever see an aristocrat who started as a dishwasher?"

Legion Advocates Permanent Draft

Reverses Neutrality Policy by Urging Help for Britain

By Alex Singleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Sept. 25.—The American Legion voted overwhelmingly today in favor of giving "all practicable aid to Great Britain" in conjunction with a defense program designed to make America "strong enough to meet and turn back any possible invasion before it arrives."

Warren Atherton, of California, chairman of the twenty-second convention's committee on national defense, termed the pro-British resolution "a new step in the direction of closer support" for that country. The legion advocated strict neutrality at its convention last year.

The veterans' recommendations for strengthening the United States armed forces went far beyond the Nation's present expansion program, greatest in its history, and at the same time called for legislation to provide for strict supervision over aliens and for elimination of "subversive" activities.

Urge Permanent Draft System

The 1,400-odd delegates, representing more than a million former service men, urged creation of a permanent system of universal military training, and increases in the personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Corps and Merchant Marine, the National Guard and the R. O. T. C.

In a long-range program growing out of the war abroad and preparedness plans at home, the soldiers of two decades ago urged acquisition of additional bases for naval expansion and indorsed "the principle of exchanging obsolete equipment for needed air and naval bases."

Universal fingerprinting of all citizens was recommended, along with legislation to prevent members of the Communist Party, the German-American Bund and "other foreign subversive groups" from holding either elective or appointive public office.

One resolution urged immediate deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader.

While Boston returned to normalcy after entertaining the biggest parade crowd in its history yesterday, the delegates picked Milwaukee as the scene for their national convention in 1941 after receiving assurances that a purse of $120,000 had been raised for expenses. Kansas City also bid for the convention.

Green Calls for War on Isms

Earlier, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, drew cheers from the convention as he called for unity in action in combating "isms" and building the Nation's defense.

Action on the mass of resolutions came without a word of discussion as the delegates adopted without a single dissenting voice hte recommendations of its committees on Americanization and national defense.

"If fighting is necessary to defend the United States," the national defense committee said, as it offered its recommendations, "we insist upon being prepared to do the fighting outside of the United States."

Fortification of Guam; an "impregnable" defense of Panama Canal and its approaches; removal of the "mediocre nad incompetent" from leadership of United States armed forces, and creation of reserves of munitions, tanks and planes demanded by the legion.

Bigger R. O. T. C. Favored

In other resolutions, the veterans called for building up the R. O. T. C.; for legislation to make military training mandatory in all Civilian Conservation Corps, and for "protective steps aboard American ships, among them requirements that they should be manned only by native-born or completely naturalized citizens, with enlisted Navy men as radio operators.

The legion's "Americanization" program was entered with the committee's assertion that the "unfriendly" elements in our midst shall not be permitted to abuse the privileges of freedom of speech and the freedom of the press in this hour of national uncertainty."

The legionnaires recorded themselves in favor of an expansion in the personnel of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; for establishment of a school to train counter-espionage agents and for "careful censoring" of all foreign language programs.

Other resolutions adopted "condemned the American Youth Congress and all other like Communist-dominated or controlled youth organizations," and urged rigid supervision over the movement of all registered aliens and passage of legislation to prevent aliens from receiving Federal jobs.

Speaks in California

Dr. James Pike, lecturer in civil procedure at the George Washington University Law School, will give an address on "Some Recent Trends in the Construction of the Federal Rules" today at the annual convention of the California State Bar Association, Coronado, Calif.

Enlistment Rush Swamps Army Recruiting Office

During the day, Mr. Roosevelt also signed into law an Army housing bill appropriating $338,263,902 for barracks and other facilities for men drafted into the service.

Meanwhile, Secretary Knox said the Navy would be able to get all the men it needed from voluntary applicants, of which there are more than 8,000 on the waiting list.

Indies Base Site to Be Studied

Recommendations on the Newfoundland bases were made by a board of naval experts, headed by Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade. The group already has inspected the site of a proposed base in Bermuda and has just completed preliminary studies for the establishment of one or more bases in Newfoundland.

They will be set up under an agreement with Great Britain, which obtained 50 old American destroyers as part of the deal.

Greenslade said his board would start next Tuesday for the West Indies, to make a three weeks' trip to look over sites for additional naval and air bases in British possessions.

Paper Predicts U. S. Arsenal Blast

New York, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The newspaper PM today reported that it had learned that United States naval authorities have information indicating an alleged German plot to blow up tomorrow a Naval arsenal on Iona Island, in the Hudson River just above Peekskill.

PM reported that at dawn Tuesday one of the extra guards assigned to the island, because of the purported sabotage plot, saw a man running away from one of the underground magazines. The guard fired at the man but it is believed that the fugitive escaped.

U. S. Insurance for Conscripts, Guard Favored by Conferees

House and Senate conferees on the corporation tax bill yesterday agreed in principle to an amendment that would establish a system of Government insurance for conscripts and members of the National Guard called to active service, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, announced.

HARRISON

The insurance system would be similar to the old war risk insurance for veterans of the World War, but the two would exist separately. Reserves would be established, just as in the case of the older system, an dsimilar contributions and benefits would be set up.

The amendment would also protect beenfits under the Railroad Retirement Act for those railroadmen who may be called to the colors.

The conferees yesterday also agreed to allow affiliated corporations to file consolidated returns, but the major points of dispute in the tax measure remained unsettled—notably the 4.1 per cent "penalty tax" and the 3.1 increase in the normal corporation tax.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 25 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Marcelino Bergalli, inspector general of the Uruguayan army, and Col. Oscar D. Gestido, commandant of Uruguay's army flying corps, left by Pan American clipper for the United States today to inspect North American defenses by Washington invitation.

Both were members of the special Uruguayan commission which conferred with two confidential U. S. agents in Montevideo last June on details of military cooperation between the two nations.

States Ready For Draft, Adjutants Say

1,600,000 to Register In New York State, Col. Mangine Reports

Mobilized for a press conference after the closing of their two-day convention, 35 National Guard adjutants general from as many States yesterday pronounced in readiness the selective service machinery many of them will head.

In the main dining room of the Washington Hotel the adjutants reeled off statistics on registrants and local boards in areas ranging from New York's east side to the hill country of Virginia.

Among the first to answer questions of reporters was Col. W. J. Mangine, representing New York State's adjutant general, Brig. Gen. L. V. Regan.

The Empire State will contribute 1,600,000 registrants to the 16,500,000 who will fill out cards at election precinct and schools in the Nation on October 16. The New Yorkers will be classified later by 525 local boards, the officer said.

390,000 to Register in Virginia

In the Old Dominion, 390,000 men will put their names on selective service records and there will be hardly a reluctant man among them, according to Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, of Richmond.

The adjutant, a lieutenant colonel of infantry in the World War, said Virginians regard conscription as "fair and square and the democratic way to do it." The Virginia machinery will be "ready to go" on appointment of 154 three-man local boards, he said.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, of Maryland, took the floor to request reporters to discontinue use of the word "conscript" for "trainee" or "selected" man. The latter, he said, is more representative of the spirit of American selective service.

Gen. Grahl Heads Group

The Free State adjutant, like his Virginia colleague a World War Infantry colonel, predicted to reporters later that Maryland would respond with a great number of volunteers for the military training.

President of the Adjutants Association, Brig. Gen. Charles Grahl said between 350,000 and 375,000 registrants would move through places of registration in his State, Iowa.

Addressing the opening session Grahl attacked the alleged delay in mobilizing the guard and the subordinate role assigned guard officials, it was learned.

Delay in calling up the guard has played havoc with certain of our personnel . . . the professional and notably the medical personnel" because of special family and financial arrangements when "they now must wait . . . four or five months before receiving orders . . . Such a state of affairs is intolerable," Grahl asserted.

Aid to China Meeting

The Washington Committee for Aid to China has announced that its first meeting of the fall will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Babcock, 4831 Old Dominion drive, Arlington. Included on the program will be motion pictures of the war in China.

Bar Proposes Free Legal Aid To Conscripts

Gen. Cox Answers Questions at Meeting Of Committee

A system to provide legal counsel to the 98,000 citizens who will be called before Washington conscription boards was drafted yesterday at a meeting of the preparedness committee of the District Bar Association. More than 50 attorneys above service age volunteered to help.

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the association, recently appointed Jerome F. Barnard chairman of the committee to arrange cooperation needed by the draft boards and assistance for drafted lawyers, in safeguarding the interests of their clients.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District draft executive and commander of the District National Guard, addressed the committee yesterday and answered questions of the more than 60 members who attended.

Two for Each Board

Gen. Cox said he would recommend adoption of the tentative plan, which Barnard said, would call for the services of 48 attorneys after the draft registration is complete.

These attorneys would be assigned, two to each of the city's 24 draft boards, to act in advisory capacities, one considering the viewpoint of the prospective draftee and the other the interests of the Government. A judge of the courts here would act as chairman of this advisory group. There would be no charge for the help of the lawyers to the draftees.

Meanwhile, local selective service officials drove toward completion preparations for the printing of thousands of registration and identification cards for prospective trainees. Discussions with local printing firms were held for the second day. Several printers will receive contracts so that the cards may be available by registration day, October 16.

Blood Tests Proposed

Simultaneously, Gen. Cox received a letter from District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, proposing syphilis blood tests for conscripts.

The blood tests, to be administered on a voluntary basis, would be made available at each of the 47 registration points.

To aid local school principals and teachers in the registration of an estimated 98,500 District men, volunteers for duty as registrars will be required. It is contemplated the difference between 3,000 teachers available and approximately 6,800 registrars necessary will be recruited from American Legion, the Junior Board of Commerce and other civic groups.

Germans Report Smashing Attacks On English Aircraft Factories

Plants Are Targets In Retaliation For Berlin Raids

By the United Press

Berlin, Sept. 25.—Adolf Hitler's aerial armada today was reported striking smashing blows at British aircraft factories and armaments plants in retaliation for successive night bombardments of Berlin.

The German planes took off at dawn to resume the attacks of returning night fleets which reported shattering assaults on London and harbor works at Liverpool and Cardiff.

The official Nazi news agency reported that several waves of German bombers escorted by fighters raided a British plane-engine factory at Filton, 3 miles north of Bristol. Many bombs were said to have been dropped and one, the DNB agency said, scored a direct hit on the main plant.

"Nuisance Attacks"

Several air battles broke out as the Nazis attacked the factory. It was said that the last bombers in the German squadron were "able with certainty to determine the devastating effectiveness of the bombs." Thick clouds of smoke rolled over the factory as they left, DNB said.

The high command said railroads had been destroyed in the neighborhood of Dover, Folkestone and Ashford. The Nazi planes bombed harbor works at Hastings, New Haven and Brighton.

Well-informed quarters said that raids today were carried out merely as "nuisance attacks" on airdromes and factories designed to worry British ground defenses and send civilians scurrying to cellars at the expense of interrupting important war work.

Ship Reported Sunk

One fleet of German bombers blasted a plane factory at Southampton-Woolstone, the high command said.

The high command claimed German planes sank a 3,000-ton merchant vessel and set another afire off the southeast coast of Ireland. Still another vessel was said to have been damaged heavily at the north end of the English Channel.

German speedboats were credited with sinking an armed merchant ship of 2,000 tons off the south coast of England.

British losses in the air Tuesday were placed at 18 planes shot down in air battles and two by antiaircraft gunners. Four German planes were listed as missing.

Death Takes Marguerite Clark, Silent Film Doll-Like Actress

Former Big-Time Star Stricken 5 Days Ago by Cerebral Hemorrhage

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 25.—Marguerite Clark, who ranked wtih Mary Pickford in the boom days of silent films, died today.

Stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage five days ago, the doll-like actress, plumper than in the days when her Dresden china figure won a generation of male movie admirers, succumbed in Leroy Sanitarium of pneumonia.

Although she was 53 and been retired for 20 years, the tiny veteran of the "road," Broadway stage and Hollywood film lots retained her interest in stage and screen affairs.

From an Ursuline convent in Cincinnati, the city where she was born, she emerged to make her stage debut at 13 as a child singer with the Aborn Opera Company in Baltimore in 1900.

A year later she went to New York and after a rigorous apprenticeship became associated with De Wolf Hopper, with whom she performed until she entered motion pictures in 1914.

She met Mary Pickford when she joined Famous Players in Hollywood and their careers paralleled from then on. They were the most popular actresses of the day.

Miss Clark's leading men included Conway Tearle, Thomas Meighan and Richard Barthelmess.

But she renounced the glamour of Kleig lights—Mary Pickford remained and became "America's sweetheart"—to marry Harry Palmerston Williams at Greenwich, Conn., on August 15, 1918.

After the war they settled in Louisiana, and Williams founded the Wedell-Williams Air Service Corporation in partnership with Jimmy Wedell. In 1935 Williams was killed in a plane crash.

The star, daughter of a Cincinnati manufacturer, was a cousin of Hugh R. Wilson, former United States Ambassador to Germany.

Editor Says Nazi Consul Criticized Him

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 25.—Written criticism of a San Antonio German language newspaper for reporting "in the very same manner the Fuehrer objects to" was attributed to Baron Edgar von Spiegel, German consul at New Orleans, today by the paper's editor.

G. F. Neuheusser, editor of the Texas Free Press, said he had turned the letter over to the Dies Committee.

"I will continue to follow my constant editorial policy of tolerance, condemnation of race hatred and strict adherence to the principles contained in the Bill of Rights," Neuheuser said he had written in reply to Von Spiegel.

Neuheusser said excerpts from the letter he credited to Von Spiegel, written in German, read:

"Your letter urges me to do what I have intended to do for the last few days, namely, to discuss with you the manner and spirit in which you occasionally report in your newspaper.

"When you read the last great speech of Adolf Hitler word for word you will see that he had occupied himself intensively with the comment of the foreign press toward Germany.

"I notice with great regret that you report in your paper in the very same manner the Fuehrer objects to—and I cannot help the impression such reporting must be hostile, to put it mildly—the article you wrote about Pastor Niemoeller also does not have my approval and contains lies.

"The Fuehrer declared that Germany in the future will proceed with all means against international newspaper propaganda.

"Please be assured that it is very embarrassing to me that I have to write this to you at all, but after what I have read lately in your newspaper I consider it my duty to do this, especially if I and my government shall support you further through our cooperation.

"Baron Edgar von Spiegel,"

Single Tax Urged As Economic Cure At Parley Here

The single tax as a panacea for all economic ills is being advocated at the fifteenth Henry George Congress, in session for three days at the Washington Hotel.

Charles H. Ingersoll, of New York, manufacturer of the watch that bears his name, spoke yesterday afternoon. He declared that by collecting only "economic rent" from land and removing all consumer taxes, prices would be reduced, production doubled, unemployment wiped out and the laborer would receive his full earnings.

Among other seakers yesterday were H. A. Haase, author of "The Economic Democracy;" Robert Clancy, editor of "Land and Freedom" and coauthor with William Newcomb of "You and America's Future."

The Women's Single Tax Club of Washington, which is affiliated with the District Federation of Women's Clubs, is hostess to the convention. It continues today and tomorrow, with a women's session tonight and a reception at the White House this afternoon for the delegates.

Gen. Honeycutt's Body Recovered

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 25 (AP).—Salvage crews today recovered the bodies of three Army men who hurtled to death in a plane crash near Woodbine, Ga., last Friday night.

The victims were Brig. Gen. Francis W. Honeycutt, commandant of Fort Bragg, N. C.; Capt. George F. Kehoe, pilot of the observation plane, and Corporal Robert J. Schmitz, radioman and mechanic.

Nazis Charge 'Brutal U. S. Imperialism'

Press Says America 'Welcomes' War to Push British From Coasts

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 25.—The Hamburger Fremdenblatt, usually well-versed in German foreign office trends, pictured the United States today as embarking upon "brutal imperialism," with England's crisis regarded as a "welcome occasion" for pushing the British away from the American coast.

Recent transactions whereby the United States got vital Western Hemisphere defense bases for 50 overage destroyers have shown the newspaper asserted, that the United States is determined to "profit from the great new order which has been set in motion by the living crisis of the British Empire."

The newspaper said President Roosevelt "is doing his utmost to recommend himself to future histories as an augmenter of his land."

Canada in the future, it went on, "will be increasingly controlled by the United States" and "the Stars and Stripes will wave over the oldest colonial possession of the empire in the West Indies."

On the Atlantic side of the Panama Canal the United States fleet is to take over the functions formerly performed by the British fleet, Fremdenblatt declared.

Harking back to President Roosevelt, the newspaper called him "the champion of world political reaction" during the Italian-Ethiopianu war, in Far Eastern affairs, and has occupied the same role in connection with "the German fight for freedom."

The United States, it asserted, is pursuing "a policy with a false bottom by which moral maxims play a great role in Washington."

The United States opposed all efforts of third powers for world political reform, it said, but "is busy tearing down the existing order so far as it concerns the American hemisphere."

The newspaper's blast came after a long period of comparative silence respecting American affairs. Just what significance it may contain was not clear, but not much is printed in the German press without a nod from high up.

The British action off Dakar, the paper said took place "apparently with North American approval," adding: "Democracy is no longer a valid watchword and has become unusable even as a cover for very real ambitions."

Sidelights of the War

Nazis Do Away With Monarchy And Parliament in Norway

Oslo, Norway (via Berlin), Sept. 25.—The end of monarchy and Parliament in Norway was announced today by Joseph Terboven, Nazi high commissioner for this conquered country.

HAAKON

He disclosed that the exiled King Haakon had been removed as chief of state, that the succession had been broken and the King's family deprived of the privileges and powers of royalty.

All political parties were abolished; Vidkun Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi, was named the sole political leader and in temporary charge of the government was placed a council of 15 selected by Terboven himself.

It was stated that Norway henceforth would be neither a monarchy nor a German protectorate. Thus, no precise definition of the state was given. The indefinite occupation of German troops was provided and a legality was given to that occupation.

One feature of the change was that hereafter Norway is to have no sort of foreign policy, no independent foreign relations with any country, the indication being that Germany will direct such matters.

It was presumed here that King Haakon still is in Britain, but the Norwegian people generally have not heard of him in months.

Moscow, Sept. 25 (AP).—Red Star, the Soviet Russian army organ, disavowed today an article it published September 21 declaring Russia is keeping hands off the "imperialistic war" for the Balkan countries.

The publication of the article was a "mistake," the newspaper said, but specific objections to the story were not made public.

London, Sept. 25.—Despite the blitzkrieg, Britain's exports and imports showed an increase last month, according to official figures published today.

Exports amounted to £32,554,729 ($130,218,916), an increase of £1,365,480 ($5,425,920), over July but a decrease of £4,522,245 ($18,088,980), under August of last year.

August imports totaled £95,019,856 ($380,079,424), an increase of £2,012,326 ($32,048,304), over July and an increase of £13,946,737 (5295,786,948), over August, 1939.

London, Sept. 25.—The ministry of food announced today that the butter ration will be reduced from 4 ounces to 2 and the meat ration will be increased to permit each person 2s 2d (43 cents) worth of meat per week instead of 1s 10d (38 cents) worth.

The reduction in the butter ration, the ministry said, was precautionary to conserve stocks. More than likely the new meat concession will last only a short time. Because of lack of animal feeding stuffs, farmers have been forced to kill off a number of livestock. This accounts for the increase in the meat ration at present.

Lord Woolton, the food minister, broadcast this appeal:

"I beg you to keep a careful watch on how you use this store, which is enough to meet our needs. But let me warn you of this: During the second year of war you must not expect to have all the things to choose from that you had the first year."

Panama City, Sept. 25.—The National assembly adopted a resolution today urging the government of Spain not to join Germany and Italy in the war. The resolution was adopted unanimously and it is understood will be transmitted by the foreign office.

Nazis Step Up Fury of Raids On England

Big Squadrons Circle London, Dart Through Defenses Singly

Other Nazi planes were over the Midlands southwest England.

Summing up the heavy action of yesterday, the air ministry said really large bomber formations had appeared over England for the first time "since the Luftwaffe's defeat of September 15"—the day when 185 German raiders were declared shot down—and added that again this time a high proportion of bombers was destroyed. To illustrate the claim, the ministry said that of the 26 German planes knocked down in Wednesday's action, 18 were bombers.

[In connection with the great September 15 battle, the New York Herald Tribune quoted Air Marshal Barratt as saying that in addition to the 185 officially listed, it was almost certain another 47 had been downed, making a total of 232. Another 17, he said, were damaged.]

During the day the great struggle spread out over a long and irregular battle line extending from London to the French and Belgian coasts.

London — where the bursting shrapnel of the antiaircraft batteries had driven off one heavy daylight attack by Nazi raiders—was no longer the one great objective, but merely one localized area of a mighty struggle.

Port of Bristol Suffers

[The German air force's stoutest blow Wednesday, the United Press said, appeared to have been struck at Bristol, great port on the west coast where bombs caused some damage and a number of casualties.

[Reports from Bristol said four German planes were downed in the course of two daylight raids on that area. Six houses were said to have been destroyed in one district alone and a number of persons injured, some fatally.]

German planes attacked nearly all of coastal England, coming over in irregular waves like infantrymen at the charge, and the alarms shrieked and died and rose again. One single group, which swept over the southwest coast and fell then into three separate squadrons, numbered nearly 100 planes.

Raiders Press Inland

In spite of terrific antiaircraft fire the raiders pressed on inland, where it was believed they were intercepted by British fighters.

Londoners first went to shelters in mid-morning, when the German bombers came back after a night attack that was central London's worst bombing of the war.

Tuesday night's raid left memorable scars, and at noon yesterday some fires still were burning. Damaged were four hospitals; "many buildings," including that of the Associated Press.

Without going into any detail, the directors of the Liverpool Cotton Exchange disclosed that "under existing circumstances" it would be closed for the next three business days.

British Bomb Berlin Five Hours of the Associated Press was five hours and 54 minutes in transit to New York, as facilities were shut down tight. London communication facilities have been operating regularly throughout the continual raids on the British capital.)

A German communique this morning stated:

"In the past night British planes again visited the capital and dropped bombs aimlessly at several places on residential sections and outlying districts.

"A number of dwellings and garden houses were destroyed and others damaged."

[This fourth successive night raid on Berlin apparently thus followed the pattern of its predecessors as developed in British communiques telling of heavy assaults on Berlin suburban factories and utilities plants.

Factories, Utilities Blasted

[Tuesday night's raid of nearly three hours, the British said, was directed at the great Siemens and Halske electrical factory, source of much Nazi aircraft equipment, at the Friedrichsfelde power transformer and switching station which supplies a large part of Berlin's industrial power, a blast furnace, and a canal bridge near Templehof airdrome.

[The accuracy of British bombing of Berlin, the New York Herald Tribune said, appeared confirmed by an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Madrid quoting the Berlin correspondent of the Madrid newspaper, "A. B. C." as saying the location of hits scored by the British was a matter which "concerned the military authorities who, as each day passes, press their fingers more tightly on their lips."]

[The Germans admitted most of Tuesday night's bombs fell in the outskirts, but refused to mention any military damage, declaring only hospitals and homes were damaged. Three casualties were reported, compared to more than a score in Monday night's attack.]

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 25.—The British struck in daylight at the German-held Channel "invasion coast" today, and said that a single British bomber attacked a German convoy of merchant vessels off the Dutch coast, sinking one.

Across the strait of Dover, British bombers went on with their bombardment of the German coastal bases and gun emplacements and the vast rolling explosions which arose indicated it was the heaviest of all the almost endless British attacks there.

Other British pilots reported they had set the infantry barracks ablaze, damaged the docks and started a great fire on and about the railroad sidings at the German-held French naval base of Brest.

A single airplane of the coastal command loosed a diving attack upon three convoyed German supply ships near the Friscan Islands, in the North Sea off the northern Netherlands coast, and was declared to have sunk the largest.

This was a continuation of attacks of "systematic" violence which the Air Ministry said were made all during last night on the "enemy invasion ports" of Delfzijl, the Netherlands; Ostend, Calais, Boulogne, Cherbourg and Le Havre.

Also bombed, it was added, were a convoy of German merchant vessels off Terschelling—one ship having been hit by three bombs and left sinking—and these other vital objectives: A power station at Finkenheerd, near Frankfurt-on-Oder, railway communications near Magdeburg, freight yards at Hamm and Brussels and several airdromes.

U. S. Reporter Tells How Bomb Brought War to Office Door

Operator Anne Keefe was sending news to New York.

Then we felt the first bomb nearby.

This explosion knocked me off the cot and shook the building.

Stout said: "That was a big one."

Anderson reported from the rooftop observation post: "They're dropping a goodish bit of stuff." Miss Keefe kept right on at the teletype.

No one went back to sleep. Even down in our cellar we could hear the German raiders. I went up to the door on the street. It was a swell night. Reverberations came from plane motors, bearing death and destruction.

There were scattered blasts of bombs for half an hour. Then we heard the whiz-z-z-z-z-z of one falling and the heavy "wham!" of an explosion.

We crouched by the wall for a long moment.

George Angus, veteran traffic employe, dashed upstairs. Fire flared in the street next to us.

"Bring a bucket of sand," he bawled. By the time someone brought up the sand it was too late. Flames were leaping and lighting up a crater 18 feet across in one direction and 30 feet in the other.

That three-story tenement across the street was gone.

All out. Get to the shelter. All out!" hollered Stout.

In the shelter, water was staining the wall nearest the explosion. Soon it was inches deep on the floor.

There was a scurry of feet on the stairs and before I turned around everyone was gone.

Stout set up temporary headquarters in another newspaper building a quarter of a mile away.

Fifteen minutes after the bomb fell, he was sending messages through to New York.

I stumbled through streets littered with broken glass to another office and duplicated Stout's messages, although the duplication was 10 or 15 minutes behind his originals.

Photographer George Baverstock, awakened by the bomb, went out and took some shots of the fire and the crater and the censor, with usual British reverence for the letter of the law, refused for an hour and a half to let us say everyone was safe, despite our pleas that relatives would be worried.

"Oh, yes, old boy," said the censor, "but for security purposes we can't give away information like that."

I went back from the office, dodging from building to building when antiaircraft shells exploded overhead.

Those familiar rooms were thick with smoke.

A broken gas main sent flames leaping against the windows. I wanted only one thing—my coat, and what is the American's most important possession in Europe, my passport. The coat wasn't there.

Angus and Editor Edward Robinson had had the foresight to grab all the coats.

While all this was going on Bureau Chief Milo Thompson had made his way to the Associated Press' secondary bureau, prepared for just such an emergency, and had it open and running by the time the raid ended. Thus our bureau had the choice of two locations while the raid still was in progress.

We worked in the newspaper building three hours.

When the raid was over we went down to the office, turned on the lights and went to work. Miss Keefe, who hadn't batted an eye all evening, sat down and punched out a story.

"Well, we oughta give them a lead on this," said Stout.

Then I went out to inspect the damage.

Three bombs had dropped near us. The one which started the fire and drove us away is on the doorstep—or where the doorstep would be if it wasn't for a big oval crater.

The streets are littered with glass and debris for 50 yards.

All the windows are gone on the first floor of the Associated Press building. Most on the second floor are gone. The air is heavy with gas. The floor of the reception hall is littered with debris, but the photo department is almost intact.

Telephone and lights are functioning but the clocks are stopped. The water which spurted into the shelter now is drained off, but the place will be damp and clammy for days.

Outside they are drilling with pneumatic drills for the broken gas main, which still is burning. Crowds stand gazing at the building.

French Blocked Blows at Nazis, R.A.F. Leader Says

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Sept. 25.—Before the French capitulation, the French high command twice foiled British attempts to attack the enemy, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Barrett, who was in command of the British airforce in France, said today.

Plans, he went on, had been made to attack the German armies at the moment they crossed into Belgium and Holland, "but the French command refused to permit such action."

On the night before Italy entered the war, three British squadrons of Wellington bombers were ready in the Marseilles area to attack a target which the air marshal described as "money for jam." At midnight, the hour at which Italy entered the war, the planes were due to take off when the officer in command telephoned to say that the French had completely blocked the air field with vehicles and were preventing the machines from leaving.

This new Chevrolet for '41 is a much bigger car in all ways—with a longer wheelbase and greater over-all length—with longer, larger, wider Fisher Bodies—with exceptionally comfortable interiors giving "3-couple roominess," or ample space for six passengers, in the sedan models.

And it's the best-looking motor car you've ever laid your eyes on—with dashing new "Aristostyle" design—with the smartest, smoothest front and fender treatment in the entire field for '41—and with concealed safety-steps (instead of running boards) at each door to assure easy, comfortable entrance and exit.

Moreover, when you drive this bigger, more beautiful, better-balanced car, you'll find that it fully maintains Chevrolet's reputation for dynamic performance and comfortable drive-and-ride leadership among all cars in its price range.

Your Chevrolet dealer cordially invites you and your family to visit his showroom, where Chevrolet for '41 is now on display . . . invites you to make a thorough-going test of the finest motor car Chevrolet has ever built . . . invites you to eye it, try it, buy it—today!

Mrs. Depew Left 9 Million to Cousins

$100,000 Given To Charities, and $150,000 to Friends

Mrs. May Palmer Depew, late of 2107 Massachusetts avenue northwest, whose will was filed in the District Court yesterday, left two cousins the bulk of the estate, estimated at more than $9,000,000.

Mrs. Depew, who died July 27, was the widow of Chauncey M. Depew, noted orator, railroad magnate and former Senator from New York. Mr. Depew died in 1928 and the fortune he left his widow was appraised in 1937 at $9,159,118.

Mrs. Depew left $100,000 to charity and a sum exceeding $150,000 to friends, relatives and to her servants. She named as her executors her cousin, Mrs. Charles C. Glover, jr., 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Attorney Henry F. Butler and the United States Trust Co. of New York.

Mrs. Depew left her real estate and tangible personal property and half the residuary estate to Mrs. Glover. The other half of the residuary estate she ordered held in trust, with the income going to Mrs. Eva McAllister Pritchett, a cousin who lives in the West, for her life, afterward, to Mrs. Pritchett's daughter for her life. Upon the daughter's death, her children will receive one-third of the trust estate and the other two thirds will revert to Mrs. Glover.

The bequests to charity included: Emergency Hospital, $50,000, of which $20,000 is designated for a course in occupational therapy; St. Matthew's Cathedral, $20,000; George Washington University, $10,000 to be added to the Chauncey M. Depew Memorial trust fund.

Personal bequests were: Mrs. Alice Wedel Jarlsburg, sister, San Sebastain, Spain, $50,000; Frederick Wedel Jarlsburg, brother-in-law, San Sabastian, Spain, $20,000; Mrs. George Wade Martin, Washington, $30,000; Mrs. Kate Deering Ridgley, Washington, $20,000; Mrs. Maion Sanderson Nall, New York, $20,000; Attorney Henry F. Butler, $20,000; William Schilling, the Depew family chauffeur for many years, $10,000; Sylvia Pavlousek, $3,000.

Mrs. Depew gave each servant in her employ one year, $250; each employed two years, $500, and each employed three years, $1,000.

Nazis Unofficially Admit Seeking Japan's Aid

Rome with Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop last week, would arrive in Berlin Friday for further talks.

May Sign New Pact

This led political sources to the conclusion that Ciano, Premier Mussolini's son-in-law, would participate in some solemn ceremony of signature. Whether Serrano Suner would participate could not be learned.

So far as it could be learned from unofficial sources, Gibraltar has been definitely promised to Spain by the Axis powers and it is assumed Axis military aid for its seizure has been envisaged.

Spain apparently also is to obtain at least a part of French Morocco and Madagascar in return for actively siding with Germany and Italy, if and when that seems the most desirable.

Official information regarding Spain's role was meager; even more so regarding Japan.

Thei ncreasing interest of the Far Eastern cosigner of the anti-Comintern pact has been demonstrated, among other ways, by at least a three-fold increase in the number of Japanese correspondents accredited to Berlin as compared to the pre-war total.

Max Sthamer, special Nazi envoy, left for Tokyo recently on an "information trip," authorized informants disclosed today. A descendant of an old patrician Hamburg family, the 45-year-old envoy belongs to Ribbentrop's personal staff and has the rank of gesandter (minister). He is reputed to be an expert on Oriental affairs.

Relations "So Cordial"

Authorized sources declared "nothing is known to us" concerning Far Eastern reports that Sthamer was reinforcing the efforts of the German ambassador in Tokyo to bring Japan into closer cooperation with the Reich. They also professed to be in the dark concerning any impending move in this direction by the Japanese.

Asked if they were prepared to deny the reports, these sources said, "We cannot deny something about which we know nothing." They added, however, that relations with Japan are so cordial Germany is being kept informed on developments in the Far East.

Italians Hail Spain's Aid

Rome, Sept. 25 (AP).—Signs that the totalitarian bloc of Germany, Italy, Spain and Japan is being solidified for earth-girdling collaboration in a more active sense grew stronger today.

A newspaper, likely to be well informed, Il Popolo di Roma, indicated that Spain already had decided on active aid to the Rome-Berlin Axis in the war against Britain.

"Italy welcomes with happiness the truly historic decisions of Spain and El Caudillo (Generalissimo Franco) and her solidarity in the war against her historic enemy," the newspaper said in a front page editorial which termed England the enemy of Spain.

Foreign circles said they believed Germany is seeking Spain's permission to land troops for an attempt to take Gibraltar, key point of Britain's lifeline to Egypt, where British troops are battling the Italian offensive.

"Nobody can be surprised if Franco's Spain, born within the orbit and by the spiritual and armed solidarity of Italy and Germany, is inserting herself in the Axis system. She is closing the circle isolating England from Europe and is regaining her active Mediterranean and African function. . . .

"She succeeds in making her voice heard at a more than ever opportune time when England, profiting from the general armistice conceded to her former ally (France), is attempting to gain control of the French colonial empire."

This was interpreted in foreign quarters as indicating that capture of Gibraltar from the British was envisaged.

Duke Relative's Former Wife Found Stripped and Slain

By the United Press

Horsham, Pa., Sept. 25.—Authorities investigating the slaying of a pretty, auburn-haired former waitress whose first husband is a member of the wealthy Duke family tonight sought to determine whether she was lured to the vacent farmhouse in which her mutilated nude body was found or went there to keep a tryst.

That would have to be established, District Attorney Frederick B. Smillie announced, before it could be determined whether the crime was a sex murder or the victim, Mrs. Ethel M. Atkins, 37, entered the house voluntarily with her killer. Evidence uncovered thus far appears to support both sides about 50-50, Smillie said.

The body was identified today by her second husband, James Francis Atkins, 32, of Philadelphia. Through him authorities learned her first husband was John Cicero Angier, whose father was a brother-in-law of the late Benjamin Duke, multi-millionaire tobacco magnate, and cousin of Doris Duke Cromwell.

Angier, located in his home in Baltimore, agreed to come here to clear up "my side of the story," Smillie announced. The district attorney said Angier was expected to arrive sometime tonight.

Mrs. John C. Angier, of Durham, N. C., said her son had married an Ethel Craft in Philadelphia about 1920.

She said their three children—John, 18; Lida Duke, 17, and Newton, 15—were living with her, and added that her son married again after divorcing Miss Craft.

Marriage license records at City Hall, Philadelphia, disclosed that Mrs. Atkins was the former Ethel M. Craft when the license to wed Atkins was taken out September 28, 1935. The marriage took place two days later.

Court of common pleas records showed that it was not until April 12, 1930, that a final rule for divorce was made absolute and a decree granted to Angier.

Atkins told police that he had not seen his wife since last Saturday. The couple had twin sons, about three years ago. According to Smillie, Atkins said Angier had been in Philadelphia and this area recently inspecting old farmhouses and estates to remodel. Angier denied this, the district attorney added.

The woman's body was discovered in the farmhouse last night when the owner began showing it to prospective clients. It was clad only in stockings and one shoe. Several rooms of the house were blood spattered and gave evidence of a terrific struggle. Mrs. Atkins' chest had been slashed and a sharp instrument plunged into the body.

Samples of Atkins' hair and dirt under his fingernails were taken for comparison with hair found under the victim's nails.

'Foreign Correspondent' Is Melodrama of the Year

Giddily Thrilling, Replete With Hitchcock Style, Palace Film Is Whopping Excitement; Short Takes F Street to National Capital

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT." Walter Wanger-United Artists picturization of a screen play by James Hilton and Robert Benchley from a story by Charles Bennett and Joan Harrison, with Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Albert Basserman, Robert Benchley, Edmund Gwenn, Harry Davenport, Eduardo Ciannelli, Martin Kosleck, Barbara Pepper, Eddie Conrad, Crauford Kent, Gertrude W. Hoffman, Jane Novak and Joan Brodel. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Previewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

THAT MASTER MELODRAMAKER of them all, Alfred Hitchcock, has turned out the year's most engrossing mystery yarn in "Foreign Correspondent." Wildly exciting, gloriously improbable, yet fascinatingly real, the Walter Wanger film opens this morning at the Palace.

If "The 39 Steps," "The Lady Vanishes" and all those other gripping tales of international espionage held you spellbound (as who wasn't?), "Foreign Correspondent" will tie you in knots. Its plot is even more ingeniously complex, its suspense moments are enough to make you pummel your neighbor's arm and cry "Watch out" for the only apparent reason thereby you might keep the hero from falling into the gears of a Dutch windmill, might somehow hold him fast to a hotel ledge, may possibly save him from being pushed off a cathedral tower into a street hundreds of feet below. All in all, you'll find "Foreign Correspondent's" adventures just about as exciting a two hours you've ever sat through.

Mr. Hitchcock's hero is at once a likable but highly improbable fellow. He's a journalist who, a year ago knew nothing of the European melee and cared less. That a swell city reporter on the staff of a New York paper should think like this makes him a quite incredible figure, although to be sure, this is not vitally important!

What is important is that he's sent by his publisher to Europe to cover the international chicanary just as though it were a police court ruckus. And what a spot hero Joel McCrea lands in when he steps off the Queen Mary! His first assignment is to interview a Dutch pacifist, one Van Meer, an ageing chap who's a key to the continental setup. So he arrives at a luncheon in a cab with Van Meer. In the middle of this lunch a wire comes from the suddenly absent Van Meer that he will not be able to keep his appointment.

Then ensue all the dashing about, all the wild chases in autos, across dikes, into windmills, aboard crowded channel steamers, a complete plethora of events that are so distinctly Hitchcock.

It wouldn't be fair—let alone clear—to tell you much more of what happens. But where some of these events take place is a story in itself. There's a lonely windmill into which it's likely some assassins have escaped. There's the wind on the outside, the creakings inside, the dim corners of evilly-lighted chambers, the infernal gears which clutch at our hiding hero's coat with ruthless suspense.

There is the maddest touch of humor in a Latvian diplomat, gorgeously played by Eddie Conrad, a stubby little man who speaks a language which only our intelligent heroine can comprehend. His rolling eyes and understanding expression at finding McCrea in Miss Day's bedroom make one of the funniest scenes in a wondrous collection of off-hand humor. As a beautiful sidelight to this character, Director Hitchcock has his hero introduce the Latvian to a Scottish gentleman, informing the latter that the diplomat is curious about his kilts. Try this one at your next diplomatic reception!

The entire cast plays with that uncanny effectiveness which the director is eternally bringing out in his players. Joel McCrea has never been more natural nor more likable, though we do wish he had been drawn a trifle more aware.

You may be sure he wakes up by the end of his adventure, which climaxes with him and his ladylove perched on the wing of a downed clipper in mid-Atlantic. The fadeout finds him in London's cruel world, a time of blackout, broadcasting a warning to not-so-far-off America to keep its lights burning behind a wall of steel. Sure it's propaganda, but persuasive and richly entertaining.

Miss Day's heroine is a charming surprise. Herbert Marshall and George Sanders offer excellent portrayals, while that fine German actor, Albert Basserman is the Dutch pacifist. Edmund Gwenn and Eduardo Ciannelli are also outstanding as suave villains. There's Robert Benchley as a London correspondent to make you laugh and wonder—.

Also on the Palace screen is a color travelogue of especial interest here. It's the Capital City as seen by the peripatetic Fitzpatrick. Keen-eyed Capitalites will be amused at his line about the "Senate wing," a description which comes on the soundtrack while the Congressional Library is on the screen.

But "Foreign Correspondent" is what you'll go to the Palace for and you'll have such a tingling set-to with him that you'll be promising yourself a return trip. It's that mystifying.

A Dashing Irishman Becomes a Middle-Aged Frenchman

BRIAN AHERNE, IRENE RICH AND GLENN FORD

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 25 (INS).—Probably the most exciting and certainly the most unusual role that Robert Taylor has ever brought to the screen will be "Viva Zapata," the life of one of Mexico's greatest patriots. Zapata was a member of Pancho Villa's band but had ideas of his own and it was his influence that changed Mexico's political policies. Zapata was eventually shot by his political enemies. M-G-M closed the deal for the film rights to "Viva Zapata" just five minutes before we went to press. It's by Edgcumb Pinchon, author of "Viva Villa," which coined shekels for M-G-M years ago when Wally Beery made it.

PARSONS

Putting stars of Bob's appeal in these Latin operas proves more than anything else how eagerly Hollywood producers are wooing our South American friends. Ty Power's "The Mark of Zorro" is aimed at the same audiences because that is where the foreign money is today. It looks like a big year for Senor Taylor, who has really been clicking with big and important stories since "Waterloo Bridge."

Bet you a nickel you will never guess what "The Strawberry Blonde," a coming Warner opus starring Jimmy Cagney and Ann Sheridan, really is. Well, prepare for a surprise. It is actually "One Sunday Afternoon," the well-known play by James Hagan, which ran on Broadway and later served as a Paramount movie for Gary Cooper. The bosses at Warners got their heads together and decided to team Jimmy and Annie because the public seemed to like them so well in "City for Conquest"; so "Strawberry Blonde" (not a bad title) will march to the screen ahead of "The Tanks Are Coming."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bette Davis and her former husband, Harmon Nelson, spent a whole evening at Pierre's in New York holding hands. Well, it's no secret these two are still in love; John Barrymore, who once again is saying adieu to Elaine, has gone to the mountains for a few days' fishing trip with John Decker; rumor is that Anita Louise's mother, Ann Beresford, and Peter Whitehead, from whom she has been estranged, will reconcile; Valentina, dressmaker to many of our stars, showed her collection at one of the shops today. Princess Vasili Romanoff was in charge. Among our well-dressed women there were Mrs. Jack Warner and Irene Dunne; John Howard accompanied his stand-in, Richard Bartlett, to Las Vegas when Bartlett married Evelyn Christopher. John then went East.

Boots Mallory, Bill Cagney's wife, is in the Hollywood hospital for observation; Mildred Temple, formerly associated with Cosmopolitan Magazine, will play the Duchess of Windsor in an Elsa Maxwell short. Mildred looks exactly like Wally. Betty Grable and Allan Gordon glimpsed at Ciro's.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 25.

"A Dispatch From Reuter's" has lots of charm from a past century, plus the dynamic power of progress which linked cities and continents together. You saw the method of the first news-gathering agency, Reuter's, which still bears the name of the man who founded it in Great Britain. It's full of action. Eddie Robinson's performance has moments of great power. Eddie Albert, Gene Lockhart, Montagu Love and Jimmy Stephenson are all excellent.

HOPPER

But while you're watching it, and you see the first carrier pigeon taking off with its message—which, in this instance, saves lives—you're thinking of what's happening today in Europe because continents were linked together. The airplane is a direct result of this first thirst for speed in carrying the news of the world.

It took me back to a visit at Eastbourne, a few years ago. I went for a ride on the English moors, and a couple of boys were looking over Beachy Head and waving me to come on. Well, having an insatiable curiosity, I went. And there, on a ledge 20 feet below, they were completely engrossed in the birth of a seagull.

I couldn't help but think what is happening in England today, and wondered if the world is any better, now that we've discovered all these things and are using them only for death and destruction. Sure, the news travels faster, but what good is it doing our civilization when it brings only death and destruction?

Arthur Murray, trying to rent his penthouse to the Slapsie Maxie Rosenblooms, said, "Maxie, this is just the place for you. There isn't a flaw in it."

"Yeh? So what do you walk on—huh?"

Margaret Sullavan's wings have been clipped—but good. It's been hinted that she's taken up flying, but the "Flotsam" company didn't discover until last week that she did her first solo, came down and nearly crashed the under-carriage of the plane. Many cadets do this, but not when they're in the midst of a $1,000,000 production. So she's given up a repeat performance for the duration of the picture—if she crashes, it will be on her own time.

Won't the laugh be on Fanny Brice when "Baby Snooks" becomes a grandmother?

Little

For the umpteenth time "The Lady Vanishes"—again at the Little. Last time this masterpiece of mystery spieling by Director Alfred Hitchcock appeared at the intimate film house was during the International Cinema Festival nearly a year ago. Now it's back again, bowing to interest no doubt generated by the Englishman's latest, "Foreign Correspondent."

The story, of course, concerns the ageing Miss Froy, known by one or two people to have been on the Paris Express. But she has disappeared, and many mysterious passengers emphatically deny the spinster was on the train. Gradually a story of international intrigue is unwound, told in the artful manner one associates with the director of "The 39 Steps," "Secret Agent" and "The Girl Was Young."

Dame May Whitty is the lady whose disappearance causes all the mystery. Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood are the folk so hard pressed to prove their story. Paul Lukas also is in the cast.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 25.

KATHARINE HEPBURN, who attended Eleanor Roosevelt's luncheon at Hyde Park on Sunday, made an entrance which surpassed any of those conceived by her Hollywood scenarists. Miss Hepburn piloted an amphibian from her home in Connecticut and descended from the clouds to land the plane on the waters of the Hudson. The star then stepped into the river and waded to the shore. She marched up the President's lawn, asking: "Is this the Roosevelt place?" . . . The President greeted her, told her that the luncheon party was being held at the other house, and offered to escort her there . . . That's why Miss Hepburn arrived by car, seated next to the President, with a group of Secret Service men all around her.

LYONS

AL SMITH is paying no heed to the pickets who parade along Broadway and Fifth avenue, urging his candidacy for the United States Senate. "This is the best time of my life, and I refuse to waste it in Washington," he states. "Public duty? I'm past the stage of life where I feel any public duty" . . . Luis Quintanilla, the Spanish artist who was scheduled to begin teaching a one-year course in fresco painting at the University of Kansas City last Tuesday, has not arrived there as yet. The missing artist and his family left New York by car, with ample time to reach there . . . John Steinbeck, whose one play, "Of Mice and Men," won the Critics Circle prize, is at work on a new play. He brought the completed first act to New York.

JACOB EPSTEIN, the British sculptor, Monday shipped to America two heads, to be exhibited at the Educational Alliance's alumni exhibit on October 7 . . . Ed Knight, publicity director for the French Line, has joined the American Army. He's wearing a uniform now—a major's . . . Jimmy Walker contracted to write his autobiography. A publisher has accepted it . . . Anne Lindbergh's new book will be off the presses shortly . . . Edward J. Noble no longer is friendly with Sam Pryor, Willkie's Eastern campaign manager. Noble resigned his post as Undersecretary of Commerce and issued an attack against Roosevelt, when Pryor dangled before him the Republican Senatorial nomination in Connecticut. The Noble candidacy was torpedoed by the Nutmeg politicians.

AIMEE CRANE, art director of Stage magazine, has just returned from Nassau, where she spent a day with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. The duchess wore a $4 dress, and $50,000 worth of jewelry. She explained—that all the clothes she had brought from Europe were unsuitable for summer climate. She now wears size 12 dresses, because the heat has shrunk 8 pounds from her weight. "You can advertise Nassau," said the duchess, "as a permanent slimming cure" . . . The Windsors are trying to live within the budget allotted them, and there'll be no more extravagant expenditures because of the New York newspaper publicity . . . There are no closets in Government House, where they'll reside, and so they'll use the old wardrobes.

THE DUCHESS wanted a diary and desk set, and so gave $6 to a messenger going to Miami, to make the purchases there. That $6 was impounded by the foreign exchange officials . . . The duke's bodyguard complained that he had been robbed—someone stole his bicycle . . . "Do you think you'll like it here?" the duchess was asked. She answered: "I miss the war" . . . She's designed a table, made of native wood and mirrors, and hopes to make its manufacture a native industry . . . She expects to vacation in America this fall . . . When her guest departed, the duchess followed her down the steps, and shouted: "Good-by. Give my love to New York."

ERIC MASCHEWITZ, of the British Broadcasting System, cabled from London Monday, informing that Fred Thompson, the playwright, is sailing for New York with an outline of a play concerning the bombing of London. It was written during the bombardment . . . Theatrical managers, mindful of Al Jolson's successful comeback in musical comedy, are luring Harry Richman, whose voice still retains its singular quality . . . Glenn Miller, Trio of Films Top New Bills

Band Leader at Earle; The Capitol Continues Thursday Openings

GLENN MILLER brings his orchestra and entertainers to the Earle stage for a week's engagement beginning tomorrow morning. Ranking as the country's most popular dance orchestra today, the group will include vocalists Marion Hutton and Ray Eberle, the Berry Brothers and Roy Davis. The orchestra will appear five times daily, doors opening for the first showing of the feature film at 9 a. m. "Sporting Blood" is the film, a tale of the Virginia horse country with Lewis Stone, Robert Young and Maurene O'Sullivan as the pivotal trio. The plot turns on an unfortunate love affair of a previous generation. William Gargan, Lynne Carver and Tom Kennedy are in the supporting roles.

Capitol

"HAUNTED HONEYMOON." Robert Montgomery is the star of this film adaptation from Dorothy L. Sayers' popular mystery novel, "Busman's Holiday." Montgomery plays Miss Sayers' well-known character, Lord Peter Wimsey, gentleman-detective whose bride is a writer of mystery stories. The film concerns their eventful wedding day. Constance Cummings plays opposite the star. Harmonica virtuso Larry Adler heads the stage portion of the bill, which further includes the Three Swifts, Caryl Gould, toe-tap dancer and Pearl Robbins, songstress. The Rhythm Rockets and Sam Jack Kaufman return after their vacations. Opens this morning.

Metropolitan

"THE LADY IN QUESTION." Brian Aherne plays the role created by Raimu in the French film, "Gribouille," released in Washington as "Heart of Paris." This Hollywood production finds Aherne playing a middle-aged shopowner called to jury duty. Rita Hayworth plays opposite him as an unfortunate lady accused of murder. He takes pity on her, installs her in his home, is appalled to discover his son slipping into criminal ways and ultimately finds his original high opinion of her vindicated. Irene Rich, Glenn Ford, George Coulouris, Evelyn Keyes and Edward Norris have other leading roles. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"HIRED WIFE." Rosalind Russell and the aforementioned Brian Aherne join Virginia Bruce in this comedy romance of a secretary who loved her boss and finally married him as a business deal. Light comedy is the film's forte, a matter greatly furthered by the appearance of Humorist Robert Benchley in the cast. Continuing into its second week.

Columbia

"BOOM TOWN." After three weeks at the Palace this star-studded action film of the oil fields and the men they make rich returns to F street for further popular acclaim. Spencer Tracy, Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, Chill Wills, Marion Martin and Minna Gombell are the leading players. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"LONDON BEFORE THE WAR." In contrast to the news flashes from the great European capital comes this short subject of London in peacetime. Tnt changing of the guard and other familiar tourist sights are viewed. "Trailer's Trail," a California travelogue; "Screen Snapshots" of old films and "Pluto's Dream House" are the other short subjects. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

Open-Air

"21 DAYS TOGETHER." Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh appear in this film of several seasons ago, telling of a romance fated to end after three weeks. "Man of Conquest," starring Richard Dix, is the accompanying feature on the new bill at the drive-in auto-theater on the Richmond highway. Opens this evening.

Song Writer Pilot

Jimmy Van Heusen, who is writing tunes with Johnny Burke for Mary Martin to sing in "Love Thy Neighbor," owns his own airplane and has a private flying license.

U. S. Makes Biggest Lumber Deal on Record—for Defense

To do this the Salvage Administration would have to go into an extensive finishing and remanufacturing business which would require large planing mill facilities and storage sheds and the setting up of a sales organization and a traffic department.

"The many gaps in grades and sizes in the salvage timber inventory would, in order to make sales to the defense agencies, have to be filled in the open market by the purchase of a large volume of other lumber by either the Salvage Administration or the defense agencies.

"A private corporation can render these and other services more easily and with much less difficulty than a Government agency.

"Finally, the requirements of the defense agencies are, in general, for higher grades in the inventory, and this would leave the Salvage Administration with a considerable volume of the lower grades on its hands which could not be disposed of advantageously."

Valued at 8 to 10 Millions

The Forest Service, which has administered the salvage program through the Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration, an operating division of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, estimated the quantity of lumber at 21,250 carloads, the value at between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The contract provided for the marketing of the lumber over a 4¼-year period with minimum amounts to be taken each quarter and payment to be made in advance of delivery. The price to be paid may be adjusted every 90 days to prevailing market prices.

The price adjustment feature, the service pointed out, should be of special interest to New England farmers whose timberlands were damaged by the hurricane just two years ago last Saturday.

The farmers were paid 90 per cent of the scheduled price for logs at the time the salvage project was undertaken, with the understanding that if the lumber could be sold at prices which would liquidate the Government's investment, any surplus would be turned over to them.

Decision to sell to the Eastern Pine Corporation, was reached, officials explained, after advertisement for sealed bids last May failed to bring a response.

An advertisement was then inserted in a widely circulated trade publication advising the industry that the service would gladly consider any reasonable proposition for sale up to August 20. Two replies were received, and service officials, after consultation with experts at the Defense Commission and other agencies concerned, decided to accept the offer of the Eeastern Pine Corporation as more advantageous.

A "substantial volume" of salvage logs, the service stated, has been reserved from the present sale as a source of raw material for the many "long-established New England wood-working plants which, because of the hurricane damage, would otherwise be seriously short of a timber supply."

Present with Joseph at yesterday's ceremony were G. D. Cook, chief of the division of private forestry; Earl S. Peirce, chief of the division of State cooperation, and Earle H. Clapp, acting chief of the service.

SSSH Worried About Its Name

The newest of the Government's alphabetical agencies is worried about its name.

President Roosevelt's executive orders setting up the national draft machinery transformed the joint Army-Navy Selective Service Committee into the Selective Service System Headquarters.

That would be all right but officials have announced a policy for full publicity of all actions and have adopted as their organization symbol the goldfish bowl which will serve in the National conscription lottery.

For this kind of an organization, the abbreviated name of SSSH seems hardly suitable.

Public Pay Rolls Up 1 Per Cent

State, county and city government employes increased 1 per cent and pay rolls 2 per cent from January to April, the Census Bureau estimated yesterday.

The total at the end of April of employes in all such government establishments, with the exception of teachers and school workers, was about 2,100,000 at the end of April. They received wages and salaries of approximately $200,000,000.

Examinations Announced

The Civil Service Commission yesterday announced examinations for assistant instructor foreman, $1,860, Bureau of Prisons, and loftsman, $7.96 to $8.92 a day, United States Coast Guard depot, Curtis Bay, Md.

Senate Limits Ramspeck Bill's Scope

Senators were on the floor. The roll-call vote came when Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, vainly sought to obtain reconsideration of the Senate's action.

Presidential Appointees, Too

Besides exempting assistant district attorneys, deputy marshals and deputy collectors, the amendment also excludes all positions filled by appointment of the President with consent of the Senate.

But it was around the exemption for deputy collectors of internal revenue that principal interest centered. In this connection, Senator Ellender observed last night:

"All this talk about needing smart men to be collectors is a lot of poppycock."

Payers of income taxes, he added, know the law and Federal law-enforcement agencies can check up on them in case of discrepancies.

When the Senate quit for the day, after several hours' talk, Senator Ellender had pending the so-called "key" amendment to substitute competitive examinations for the noncompetitives required in the bill. A proposal to give incumbents a 10-point credit on the competitive examinations was deleted by the Louisianan after Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and others had objected to such an advantage.

Vote Delay Predicted

In view of the Senate's slow progress on the bill, Senator Mead predicted last night that a vote on the measure itself would not come until late today or tomorrow. If the bill passes in present form, it will enable the President to bring more than 150,000 Federal employes into the civil service by executive order.

It has been estimated that even with the noncompetitiv examinations now prescribed in the bill, some 20 per cent of the employes affected might lose their jobs, while if competitive tests are to be required, the mortality among incumbents may reach 70 per cent.

Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers, yesterday attacked the proposal for competitive examinations as a menace to the jobs of thousands of Federal employes "who have competently filled their positions for years."

On the other hand, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, urged the Senate to "assert its belief in competitive examinations." He said that in the absence of such tests, the Ramspeck measure should be called "a bill to provide life tenure for 200,000 patronage appointees and postpone the application of civil service until 1960, when all incumbents are dead or ready to quit."

Hatch Hits Patronage System

In the debate on the proposed exemption for deputy collectors of internal revenue, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico warned that "the patronage system is wasteful and extravagant"—and no private business under the sun could last 30 days under such a system as that."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia declared that placing these positions under civil service would result in millions of dollars additional revenue to the Government because it would put an end to the turnover in the offices of collectors with every change of administration.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said that some salaries in newer Federal agencies were "grossly extravagant" and should be reduced if the pay of comparable workers in the older departments is not raised.

McCormack Made Majority House Leader

Defeats Woodrum, 141-67; Caucus Almost Deferred Vote

McCormack in a short speech expressed his "profound appreciation" for the honor conferred and told members:

"I consider it a trust to be exercised in the best interests of the Democratic Party and the country."

McCormack will immediately take over the office which has been filled temporarily by Representative Lindsay C. Warren, of North Carolina, who will retire shortly to accept the President's appointment as Comptroller General.

The postponement move would have continued Warren in the acting leadership role for the remaining days of the session.

McCormack was nominated by Representative Arthur D. Healey, of Massachusetts, while Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia, proposed Woodrum. The motion to adjourn was made by Representative Carl Vinson, of Georgia.

President Aloof

Neither of the candidates is a New Dealer in the "100 per cent" class, but Woodrum perhaps had been the more independent of the two, opposing many of the Administration's spending and relief policies. There was never any evidence of the President's hand either way in the caucus.

McCormack generally supported the President, but sometimes took issue with Administration tax policies. Third ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee, he joined in the successful demand for revision of the undivided profits tax. He voted for the Fish amendment to delay conscription 60 days.

But while his at times has been a potently independent voice, he declared for a third term when it was unpopular to do so in his district. He was a leader in the movement to break Postmaster General Farley's hold on Massachusetts and swayed the Bay State convention votes to the President.

Succeeds Rayburn

The tall, bushy-haired, eloquent Bostonian succeeds to the leadership post left vacant by Speaker Sam Rayburn, who became Speaker by House acclamation after the death of Speaker Bankhead. Rayburn congratulated McCormack and the House on "a good choice."

The election gave House Democratic recognition for the first time in recent years to the politically strategic New England sector and gave Massachusetts men the House leadership role in both majority and minority parties. Representative Joseph W. Martin, minority leader, is from North Attleboro, Mass.

The 49-year-old McCormack came up the "Alger" route, shining shoes and selling newspapers to aid a widowed mother. Educated in the Boston public schools, he developed a successful law practice and received his political schooling in the Massachusetts Legislature. He was Democratic leader of the Massachusetts Senate for two years before coming to Washington with the Seventieth Congress.

A World War veteran, he is married but has no children. He avoids social functions, and has no hobbies except politics.

For Child Refugees

Non-British child refugees who fled to England for asylum when their countries were invaded and overrun by Germany will henceforth be allowed to come to the United States without regard to quota restrictions. Under the new arrangement, the Government has agreed to grant visitors' visas to such children for the duration of the war.

The necessity and wisdom of such a change in the visa regulations concerning refugee children need not be argued. Day after day London and other British centers are being subjected to fearful bombing by German planes. Every child removed from Great Britain and given sanctuary on this side of the Atlantic reduces the number of potential victims of Hitler's minions of death.

If adequate and safe transportation can be found, it will now be possible to bring to this country some of the Belgian, Dutch, Norwegian, Danish and French children at present in England. Together with the British children already here and those who are to be sent here later, the number of these young refugees finding a haven in the United States is thus certain to increase far beyond the present total.

This will mean, among other things, an increase in the burden placed on the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. That body has been working in close cooperation with the Committee for the Care of European Children, but its functions have not been confined to children coming under the auspices of the committee.

The Children's Bureau is also engaged in the preparation of standards for the reception, care, placement and supervision of young refugees. It has maintained relationships with State welfare departments and designated child-care agencies and reception centers. And it has developed and is maintaining a central registry that will provide up-to-date and continuous information at all times concerning the whereabouts and care of refugee children in this country as well as the parents.

These indispensable activities have strained the fiscal resources of the Children's Bureau to the breaking point. Yet a $125,000 item requested by the bureau to carry on this work was cut out of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act by the House. It should by all means be restored by the Senate.

Symbol Of Friendship

The healthy economic and financial progress made by the Dominican Republic during recent years was signalized this week by the signing of a convention between that nation and the United States. Thus ends the general receivership of Dominican customs in existence since 1924.

That receivership was an outgrowth of United States military intervention in the Caribbean republic in 1916 following a period of internal disorder. The occupation lasted eight years and was followed by the negotiations of a treaty whereby the task of collecting Dominican customs was entrusted to an official named by the President of the United States.

It is understandable that for some time the Dominican government has been eager to end this last vestige of foreign control. The United States also has been eager to liquidate a state of affairs objectionable to a friendly neighbor. The new convention appears to satisfy both these aims. It provides that a depository bank, to be selected by mutual agreement between the two governments, will be the sole depository of all the revenues of the Dominican Republic. Provisions are also made for the payment of interest and amortization of that nation's foreign indebtedness.

The signing of this convention gives renewed expression to the Good Neighbor policy and symbolizes the spirit of friendship and mutual respect which exists in inter-American relations.

A Vote For Spoils

Spoilsmen came to the fore in the Senate yesterday and ripped a hole through the Ramspeck bill that will be difficult to repair. By a small margin of votes they succeeded in exempting assistant United States attorneys, deputy collectors of internal revenue and deputy marshals from the proposed extension of the merit system.

As passed by the House and approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee, the Ramspeck bill represented a generous compromise with political-minded legislators. It would not bring the spoils system to an abrupt end. It would merely grant power to the President to "cover into the classified civil service" positions in the executive branch of the Government now exempt from merit-system requirements.

The bill does not provide that these posts be filled by competitive examination. It calls for only non-competitive examinations for persons already holding these positions. Indeed, friends of the measure are properly fighting a proposed amendment designed to make the examinations competitive. They realize that such a change would defeat the bill in Congress or render it inoperative if it should be passed.

Most of the growth of the civil service system has come about through the covering-in process. Friends of the merit system realize that it is better to make progress through use of that method than to make no progress at all. So this aspect of the bill can be cheerfully approved as a compromise with those who believe that Government jobs should be reserved for loyal followers of the Administration in power.

But when the Senate goes beyond this concession and attempts to make certain that spoils will be reserved to members of Congress, its action is keenly disappointing. Prosecuting attorneys, deputy marshals and tax collectors are among the employes who should be farthest removed from politics. The Hatch Act has already forbidden men in these posts to take an active part in political campaigns. Yet a majority of the Senators present yesterday insisted on the right of placing political henchmen in these vital positions.

The vote on the Ellender amendment can be interpreted only as a flagrant revival of the spoils psychology in the Senate at a critical period in our history. The Senate had previously showed good judgment in eliminating the provision designed to sabotage the bill by withholding its benefits from States with more than their allotted quotas of Federal employes. But the salutary effect of that vote has been more than offset by yesterday's surrender to the patronage hunters.

Hope for enactment of a satisfactory bill now seems to center in the probability that the conference committee will repair the wreckage engineered by a small majority in the Senate.

Time Out

With due formalities, the much discussed Time Capsule has been buried in its imperishable tomb 50 feet beneath the site of the New York World's Fair. There, if all goes according to plan, it will remain until A. D. 6939, when it will be opened by the archeologists of that distant day.

We dare say they will be more astonished by what they find than were the Conquistadores when they stumbled across the Mayan ruins of Yucatan. For by 6939, no doubt, all other physical traces of our civilization will have vanished from the earth. New civilizations will have arisen, waxed, declined and disappeared. If by that time ours is remembered at all, it will be only through legend, as the supposed civilization of Atlantis was remembered in Plato's day.

What technique the seventieth century archeologists will use to reconstruct the life and mores of then defunct and buried cultures we have no means of knowing. But we do know that the archeologists of this day set great store by the stuff they call artifacts, i. e., man-wrought articles of everyday use. Thus the sayants who prepared the Time Capsule considerately included a few dozen of our American artifacts, such as a toothbrush, a miniature camera, a watch, a safety razor, a fountain pen, a can opener and a Bible.

They put in also a vast roll of microfilm giving the complete record in writing and pictures of our times. They also included a manual of instructions, something after the idea of the Rosetta Stone, on how to read the English language.

Of course, there is no guarantee that the seventieth century archeologists will be as bright as we expect them to be. They may not be able to make out the instructions, or even to realize that they are instructions. They may, for example, decide that the microfilm is some kind of ritualistic bandage elaborated with mythical figures and let it go at that. Perhaps they will associate the fountain pen and the zipper tobacco pouch with fertility rites, especially since the seeds of our principal crops are likewise inclosed in the capsule. The safety razor might be considered a form of the familiar Tau symbol, or Nile key. But what they will make of a can opener we cannot even guess.

One thing those seventieth century excavators will be certain to note: the complete absence among these artifacts of anything resembling lethal weapons—no spears, no swords, no bombs or machine guns. And the phonograph discs can scarcely be confused with shields. Thus the archeologists would be forced to conclude that the arts of slaughter were unknown among us, that ours was an unparalleled age of peace and brotherhood. And ever thereafter historians might assert that the only truly Golden Age of mankind was the one which flourished in the piping days of King Westinghouse the Great.

Salutary Change

The Senate Committee on Immigration is to be commended for its sensible modification of a dangerous and wholly unjustifiable provision in the bill to codify the nationality laws of the United States.

The bill as a whole, as The Post has previously had occasion to say, is eminently wise and necessary. But one section of the measure, as it was approved by the House, would have deprived of citizenship any American "entering, or serving in, the armed forces of a foreign state unless expressly authorized by the laws of the United States."

That restriction would penalize those Americans who volunteer to fight in defense of Canada and Great Britain, thus doing for friendly nations what Lafayette, Pulaski, Steuben and other foreigners did for the United States when this Nation was struggling for its existence.

The Senate committee has now modified the original provision so as to take away the citizenship of only those who, in joining the armed forces of a foreign state, also acquire the nationality of that state. Since neither Canada nor Great Britain requires Americans who join their forces to take an oath of allegiance, such a rule would not bar enlistments in the Canadian and British armies. The wisdom of this modification is hardly open to question.

Inexcusable Menace

Some automobile accidents occur in spite of safety precautions. But when traffic casualties are a direct result of death traps on the highway they are doubly tragic. For in such instances life is sacrificed to the negligence of public agencies.

There had been ample warning of the tragedy in Silver Spring on Tuesday. Two persons had been injured during the last month by crashing into the steel pillars in the roadway at the Georgia avenue underpass. It was almost inevitable that some motorists should forget that the Maryland State Roads Commission tolerates obstructions of this sort on a heavily traveled highway. It was thus almost inevitable that someone should be crushed to death in colliding with these steel pillars which loom up just at the point where the highway narrows to a single lane of traffic.

The death of Mrs. Elna Allen must be attributed, then, to the engineering stupidity which permitted such an underpass to be built. In this instance Maryland has not only failed to contribute to the safety of its citizens; it is also responsible for a constant menace to safety. So long as traffic is forced through this unnatural bottleneck, with a cement wall on one side and steel pillars on the other, the danger of fatal collisions will be present.

The Silver Spring Businessmen's Association and the American Automobile Association have good reason to use sharp language in demanding that this menace be eliminated.

No two people are alike, and both of them are glad of it.

A reformer is a person with a dog-in-the-manger complex who pursues the happiness of others.

"This would be an almost impossible world if everybody in it thought alike," asserts a writer. Perhaps it would. Still, with everybody thinking differently, what is it?

Tough On Germs

From the Detroit News

Warning, germs; be careful where you light! The chemists are putting germicide stuff into wall and floor paint!

To human beings this announcement of speakers at the convention of the American Chemical Society should bring lively hopes. In years to come no doubt people will look back to our time and marvel at the risks we take in the most ordinary affairs. Our haphazard, occasional sterilizing of utensils indiscriminately used by many people; our but partial appreciation of the need of sanitary precautions, and our ignorance of causes of diseases and even epidemics that occur with destructive frequency, will amaze intelligent persons of some coming generation.

The Destroyer Deal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a previous letter I mentioned the supply of planes to one belligerent as difficult to bring into line with the principles underlying the Monroe Doctrine. Since then a number of American destroyers have been exchanged with the British Empire for strategic bases.

These destroyers will, one may assume, be utilized for attempting to blockade Europe, so that on this occasion the United States assisted in preventing food supplies from reaching the populations of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, France, Belgium, Holland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Greece and a number of other countries, quite apart from Germany. When, therefore, a family in Finland or Denmark has to do with less coffee, or a French housewife to economize the consumption of fat, the United States is in part responsible. Such at least, is the view expressed in neutral circles in Europe.

While it is true that there is really no food shortage in Europe, this makes no difference in principle; and it is a fact that certain commodities, notably coffee, are scarce, while others have to be husbanded to prevent possible shortage. During the Spanish civil war the outcry against Franco for blockading sectors of the country in the hands of his enemies was great—but this time, as already remarked, with the aid of America's ships; only neutral civilians thus suffer whatever privations result.

Imagine a European state supplying ships to one of two beligerents in Central or South America, so as to enable him to blockade the whole American continent, including the United States. Such is the state of affairs today, with the names of the continents reversed. I wonder whether the American public is aware of this.

Of Beasts And Men

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was grateful to note that man's best friend has at least one loyal friend in Poundmaster Marks, who reasonably and properly refused to be stampeded into killing all the present inmates of the pound because one unfortunate dog, who had no contact with the others, is alleged to have had rabies.

Man is all too prone to resort to wholesale killing for any misfortune that befalls him and his kind. In fact, organized mass slaughter and preparations for more of it on an always greater and more efficient scale has now become the leading industry in all quarters of the globe of that higher animal man, who affirms himself to be made "in the image and likeness of God."

In the face of this spectacle of human "intelligence" one wonders how any one has the effrontery to refer to "dumb" animals or to "lower" animals.

T. H. RUSSELL.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 20.

Married Men First

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At times like the present all good Americans want to do their bit to help out. As I am too old to fight I would like to suggest what I believe to be a very good idea. I suggest that the various draft directors select married men first—that is, married men with working wives.

Housing Question

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter published recently in your columns from "Victim of Circumstances," detailing his inability to find decent living quarters in the Washington area at reasonable prices, is no news to those of us who have lived here ten years or more.

It does, however, contain a thought that should be pushed with energy. Your correspondent points out that the Government operates cafeterias to supply the employes with food at reasonable prices, but that no change of policy is entailed in offering housing.

It can, indeed, be argued with merit that since the Federal Government creates the congestion here and consequent boom prices, it is under obligation to see that its employes have a little left over after paying the grocer and the landlord.

What is needed is some active work. There exists here a glowing opportunity for a man to organize a Washington Householders' Association, supported by small individual payments from the several hundred thousand citizens who occupy the area's apartments. Two thousand families, contributing 25 cents a month each, could provide $500 a month, and much could be done with that sum to reduce their living expenses.

A strong leader, versed in ways of keeping this issue before the public and Congressional committees, would be a public benefactor. And while he could expect strong opposition, I believe that in the end he and his supporters could remove from Washington the stigma of the highest shelter costs in the Nation.

ANOTHER VICTIM.
Arlington, Va., Sept. 24.

On Qualities Befitting A President

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Candidate Wendell Willkie, not long ago, made the amazing accusation that President Roosevelt encouraged the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia by indorsing the appeasement offered to Chamberlain and Daladier by Adolf Hitler at Munich.

Roosevelt did nothing of the kind. What he did was to suggest that all of the nations concerned sit at the diplomatic "round table" and discuss the momentous question of peace not only of Europe but of the entire world. This having been arranged, the Government of the United States would gladly join the conference and render all assistance possible.

A great many American citizens have been congratulating themselves that the two major political parties had shown excellent judgment in selecting Roosevelt and Willkie as their standard bearers. They believed our country would be safe under the wise guidance of either of these candidates. However, it is regretted that lately Mr. Willkie has plunged deeply into political "claptrap" and made statements that were not only unfair to his opponent but false.

But Willkie's claims should not deceive the average citizen. He should have taken Lincoln's advice:

"In an argument it is good policy never to plead what you need not, lest you oblige yourself to prove what you cannot."

If a census of all men in public life in the United States were taken today, no two could be found that knew more about foreign affairs and could handle the situation better in Eufope and the Far East than President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull. Then would it not be the height of folly, in this hour of world crisis, to experiment with a political novice and opportunist like Wendell Willkie?

D. J. SPOTTSWOOD, M. D.
Mobile, Ala., Sept. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter to The Post several days ago one of your readers accused Mr. Willkie of trying to serve God and Mammon, because he once acted as the head of a public utility and is now aspiring to the Presidency of the United States.

Possibly there are some grounds for this accusation, but it seems to me that President Roosevelt several weeks ago furnished still better grounds for the double master service accusation when, on the one hand, he dedicated a day for national prayer for peace and on the other, donated 50 of our destroyers to a belligerent nation to continue the war.

Mr. Willkie, at least, gave up the one job before he tried for the other.

J. J. SPERRY.
Woodstock, Va., Sept. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wendell Willkie. Big, likable boy? He gives himself mostly to two things—generalities and the business man. He pleads for democracy; but democracy, like any game of equal opportunity, runs itself out when one fellow gets all the chips.

That's about where we were in 1929. Hence a "new deal" was inevitable—that, or revolution, as our "hunger marchers" forecast. There can be no survival of democracy until the "fittest" become spiritually as well as economically fit.

We are at the moral crossroads today. Now, if ever, we need the leadership of a synthetic type of mind. Willkie, brainy as he is, does not seem to exhibit that rarest of all qualities.

Religious Stimulation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because we believe the policies and work of the National Committee for Religious Recovery have immediate value in upholding the power of a free press, which is the bulwark of all free enterprise, we feel that you will want to know of the progress of this organization, incorporated only nine months ago by a public-spirited national group of men and women.

We stand unique as being composed solely of laymen and as having a purpose that is not only strikingly simple but fundamental to the preservation of American civilization and ideals. Clergymen are not invited to membership, since we feel that they can best carry on their consecrated calling when they are backed by a laity aroused to its duties.

The purpose of the National Committee for Religious Recovery is to stimulate interest in church attendance among all religious faiths, to encourage people everywhere to greater loyalty to the church of their choice, and to urge parents to give their children the priceless inheritance of religious faith, thus arming the rising generation in this great Republic with spiritual belief as their greatest safeguard against the godless ideologies which are now working for our material and spiritual destruction.

We greatly value the friendly attitude of the press in our endeavors. On the air our message is now reaching practically every part of the country on more than 100 radio stations (108 at this writing), both independent and network owned, in 40 States and Puerto Rico.

Memorable Tubs

WONDERFUL things, tubs! In their place, of course. But . . . can you ever forget that little inn up in Canada when you felt as though it simply couldn't be?

You had asked the nice, French-accented inn-keeper if he had a room with bath. He had beamed all over and said yes, he had that very thing. And, indeed, he had spoken truly.

There was the room. There were the twin beds. And there, riding at anchor between those two beds, was a gigantic bathtub. It was as though the Normandie or the Queen Mary had been becalmed in the bedroom!

Then there was that breath-taking tub in the French pension. Rather, the tub was not in the pension but was located in a sort of box stall on the back porch.

There was a door to the stall, but, owing to some structural peculiarity, it could never be closed. The students in the pension claimed that the door had been purposely fixed that way in order to facilitate one's departure when the stove blew up. For in the stall was a fiery and impetuous little water-heater. Once it had actually exploded, and the student who was taking his bath at the time had emerged in a cloud of cinders, and very little else.

But, as Mademoiselle herself explained, what could you expect since he had not made the necessary financial arrangements but had actually undertaken his bath without consulting her.

Consequently, you yourself were always particularly careful to consult Mademoiselle when you wished to bathe. A lengthy parley was held, and when all was complete, Mademoiselle would announce, usually at meal time, that you would occupy the bath at such and such an hour. Her impressive tone suggested that you were about to embark on a Channel crossing, or swim the Hellespont, or go over Niagara Falls in a barrel!

Your fellow students treated it as an occasion of real magnitude, and solemnly wished you luck, expressing the inspiring hope that you would not end up as a cinder.

Full of foreboding, you went slinking along the dank porch and entered the chilly stall, a sort of Cave of the Winds. The tub itself was a magnificent affair, a regular Napoleon's Tomb, and about as cheerful.

The water heater had already been lighted. So, cautiously you turned the ancient faucets and there was a terrible hissing sound and a cloud of steam burst forth. You glanced nervously at the heater. It was beginning to shake. Then it began to dance. A kind of carpet-cutting jitterbugging. But at the time you did not analyze it. It kept this up all the time you were taking your bath, which was, to be truthful, practically no time at all!

Shipboard tubbing has its surprising moments, too. Not the surprising stickiness of hot salt water, nor the surprising refusal of your favorite soap to lather. No, these are just common or garden variety of sea-changes.

Wait until you're anchored in some lovely-looking harbor, and while taking a quick bath, decide that the steward hasn't drawn the water in your bath as deep as you would like. Impatiently you turn the enormous faucets on full force, and all at once you find yourself in the midst of a swirling medley of orange peels, and banana skins that have known better days, and various other over-ripe morsels. Leaping hastily from the debris, you realize, disillusioned, that the lovely-looking harbor is in your tub!

Of all the tubs in the world the most wonderful is, unquestionably, the venerable tin tub in the old Vermont home. It lies encased in a huge brown box that looks as big as a drydock. Its gleaming silver sides are always warm, with never that clammy, otherworld chill of porcelain. The climbing into it is not as in some modern tubs, like descending a slippery Alpine crevasse, for you can always find a nonskid foothold on its old tin floor.

Its dignity is, at the very least, that of the Bank of England. Bathing, you feel, is an institution, and not to be undertaken lightly.

"Showers," it seems to tell you, "are mere upstarts. Your tiny French tubs, in which you must sit like a hunched-up grasshopper, are little better than teacups. And your modern porcelain pools are a relic of Roman decadence."

Perhaps devotion to this tub dates back to the vacation days of childhood. Tubs in the city were about as popular as poison. But up in the country it was always fun to bathe in the big, tin tub.

First, you had to put a lot of extra "chunks" in the kitchen range, to feed the boiler. Then you used to keep touching the boiler to see how high the hot water had risen. Before you drew the water, you had to unwind from the faucets a yard or two of chain that help the "stopple," a fascinating workout!

But, best of all, when you were through, and had replaced the little dish underneath the faucets so that their dripping would not rust the tin, you noticed with grateful [illegible] that the customery ring [illegible] the tub was, through no effo[illegible], all but invisible to the mo[illegible] maternal eye! WANDA WEBB.

Recognition Of De Gaulle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do you not think that The Post could do a grand service for the cause of Britain by inducing our State Department to suggest that the provisional French government in London send an Ambassador to this country?

Our recognition of such an appointment would be quite in line with the course pursued in a like case with the exiled governments of Holland, Norway and Czecho-Slovakia. It is a matter of universal knowledge that the Petain-Laval cabal of Vichy is simply a cog in the Hitler machine.

Our recognition of the De Gaulle cabinet might be the decisive factor in shaping the course of the French colonies now apparently in a quandary between patriotism and shame.

HOWARD PITCHER OKIE.
Washington, Sept. 23.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Greater War Begins

ONCE HITLER broke through the Allied defenses on the Western Front, the European war was destined inevitably to become in the literal sense, and not merely rhetorically, a world war. We are now witnessing the events which were prepared in May. The battles over England and northern Europe and in the English Channel, at Gibraltar, toward Egypt and Suez, at Dakar in Africa and in French Indo-China are the opening battles of a great campaign in which there is at stake, not frontiers in the European continent, but the mastery of the oceans of the world.

These battles, at so many widely separated points across more than half the world, are strategically one great battle. A study of the map, or rather of the globe of the earth, will show that these battles are being fought at all the gateways through which Germany, Italy and Japan must pass if they are to break the naval power which now limits their conquests to the territories they can occupy with their armies. For if they are to become the undisputed masters of Europe, Asia and Africa they must be masters of the seas. They must knock out that sea power which is the shield and the sword of the free nations, and they must themselves rule the seas. This, therefore, is no longer the Battle of Britain alone. This is the first phase of the Battle of the Great Oceans.

WARSHIPS alone cannot control the oceans. They must have fortified harbors from which to operate, shipyards and drydocks and repair shops, and all the passageways from one ocean to another must be held. The shortest passageway between the Atlantic and the Pacific is the Panama Canal. By holding the canal our fleet can be concentrated in either ocean. But Panama is not the only passageway between the two oceans. There is another way which runs through the English Channel, the Straits of Gibraltar, the Suez Canal and past Singapore. This is the way the Russian fleet went to the Pacific in the Russo-Japanese war. This is the way the British and French fleets have generally gone from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

At the present time we control the Panama passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific and Britain controls the other passage. While this control remains, the German, Italian and Japanese navies are divided. The passages through which they must pass in order to concentrate their forces for a decisive blow are plugged in the English Channel, at Gibraltar, Suez and Singapore. The campaign which is now engaged has for its objective the removal of these plugs. This is the meaning of the Japanese movement into Indo-China and Siam at the back door of Singapore; of the Italian campaign in Somaliland and in Egypt; of the Italian incitements against Greece, of the pressure of the Axis on Spain in regard to Gibraltar, and upon the Vichy government in regard to the French African empire on the Atlantic Ocean. The grand objective of the Axis is to crush seapower in its main base in the British Isles, and at the same time to clear the passageway from Europe to the Pacific so that the German, Italian and Japanese navies shall be free to act together. If this objective is attained, we shall stand on the defensive in the two oceans with the initiative in the hands of Japan, Germany and Italy.

THIS IS MUCH the most serious prospect that has confronted this Nation for a hundred years, that is to say, since the breakdown of the Spanish Empire under the blows of Napoleon and the subsequent alliance of Russia, Prussia, Austria, France and Spain. In the twenty-five years, from 1798 to 1823, from the first news that Spain had ceded Louisiana to France until the Canning-Rush negotiations laid the foundation of the Monroe Doctrine, the United States stood in the greatest peril. In these twenty-five years the United States was threatened by Russia coming down the Pacific Coast from Alaska, by Napoleonic France established in New Orleans, in Florida, and in the West Indies and by a continental alliance that aimed at the conquest of Central and South America.

The peril passed because in the end Great Britain defeated Napoleon and was powerful enough, therefore, to forbid the continental alliance to embark on the conquest of Spanish America. Without the British naval victory of Trafalgar, the failure of Napoleon to invade Great Britain, and in the end his final fall at Waterloo, it is difficult to imagine how the small, weak Republic of the United States could have prevented the European struggle for empire from embracing the Western Hemisphere. If this had not been prevented, our century of isolation would not have been a century of isolation.

WE SHALL do well to remember these things now. For though the circumstances are different, though the balance of forces is different, the central principle of our policy must be the same. We must see, even more lucidly and consistently than did Jefferson and Madison, that if the great oceans are not controlled by ourselves and by nations with whom we have a common interest, there must develop a gigantic struggle on these oceans and at every weakly defended strategic point on the shores of the two oceans.

Seeing that, we must realize with equal clarity that the first principle of a sound strategy is not to scatter one's forces but at all costs to keep together and intact a superior fleet, and to hold its most vital bases. The most vital base of the Anglo-American sea power is the British Isles, on which the British fleet is based, and the critical region is the North Atlantic Ocean from Ireland to Panama to Dakar. This is the citadel of British and American power, and it should be held firmly, remembering always that we must not become deeply engaged at any outpost in the more distant oceans as long as the security of the North Atlantic region is in doubt. For within the North Atlantic region lie the capital sources of British and American sea power; from this region of our factories, shipyards, mines and fields must come virtually all the power that either nation can exercise in the far Pacific, in South America, in Africa, or anywhere else.

WE MUST remember that the world is not flat like a map printed in a newspaper, but that it is a globe. Therefore, we must not forget for one instant that we are witnessing one great battle for mastery of the seas, not a series of unrelated and accidental engagements in distant places for the mere seizure of deserts and jungles in Africa and Asia.

Bearing that in mind, we shall mix courage with prudence: We shall have the courage to take all possible measures to support British resistance at the center of the whole conflict, and with it the prudence to avoid a decisive entanglement anywhere else until the defense of the North Atlantic region is secured.

Books And Things

Good Red Italian Wine

JOHN FANTE, born, like his mother, in Denver, is an American and he is also an Italian and he calls his new book "Dago Red" (Viking, $2.50.)

"Dago Red" has in it the warmth and the simplicity and the sudden surprising rage of the good red wine of Sullivan street and Los Gatos. It is a better-tempered book than "Wait Until Spring, Bandini" or "Ask the Dusk"; it still has something of the strutting insecurity and overloud singing of a man who has tipped many glasses of Dago red. You might call Fante an Italian Saroyan, but he is less of a poseur; he has the same sense of magic in the American air and the same chip on his Italian-American shoulder. Read the story called "Odyssey of a Wop" and you will understand why; Fante has not always attained to its triumphant contempt for the man who is ashamed of being an Italian.

To read "A Wife for Dino Rossi" is almost as good as eating Maria's ravioli; the story reeks with good kitchen smells. The Toscanas of this book of stories are unmistakably the same folk as the Bandinis; they are the family John Fante knows and loves and has escaped and never can altogether escape; the father he worshiped who is at bottom a violent child, making one think of a puppy lost in the snow; the mother whom he and all his brothers and sisters loved without worship; the Uncle Frank, who alone among the Italians at his son's funeral, did not cry, and Fante himself, the Jimmy of the story-stealing candy, confessing blasphemy to the church, definitely discovering sin and in the end very grateful to know that his church is, after all, a good sport. There is a true Italian richness to these American stories. They are not the wine of Chianti; they are honest Dago red, a good fresh taste in American writing.

HARLAN HATCHER'S "Buckeye Country: A Pageant of Ohio" (Kinsey, $3.75) and Phil Stong's "Hawkeyes: A Biography of the State of Ohio" (Dodd, Mead, $3) are in a sound, well tried tradition. Both books present their States with enthusiasm but in a definitely post-Main street mood. They cheer and they chuckle. They delve into history and folklore which the Works Projects Administration research workers have been assembling, distressingly similar in one State after another.

As to pronunciation, the books are precise. Ohio, says Mr. Hatcher, should sound "like two quick Indian grunts—"Uh-hia—with a tomahawk stroke on the i." It is hard for a New York man to say, he asserts, and an Englishman simply can't try it. Any one who has listened to a radio report of a political convention will recognize the sound. . . . And as to Iowa, Mr. Stong is as intolerant of divergence. He will not even admit the version used by the sons and daughters of Iowa who each year gather in Los Angeles by the hundred thousand and chant "Ioway! Ioway! That's where the tall corn grows!" It is "I-o-weh" or "I-o-wuh," he insists, and the accent must be strong on the "I."

Ohio, says Mr. Hatcher, is famous for its literacy, its Presidents, its museums, its canal, colleges and churches, its floods and its apples. He calls Johnny Appleseed the Saint Francis of the State, but has a perverse theory that Johnny sold rather than gave away his seeds. He tells also the great State legends of Gallipolis and of Blennerhasset, which he admits are true. And throughout he writes with a proper Ohio reserve.

Iowa exports editors to New York, actors to Hollywood and baseball pitchers to Cleveland, says the exuberant Mr. Strong, but it is primarily a farm State, "first in corn, first in hogs and first in the gizzards of its countrymen." It leads the Nation in literacy (just like Ohio), farm-owned automobiles, corn, oats, hogs, horses, poultry, hay, telephones and radio (per capita) and fattened cattle—but not in poets. It has poets, too, and Mr. Stong waxes almost as poetic about them as about its country storekeepers and its contented tenant farmers and its sharp-shooting milkers, who can hit a cat in the eye at 50 feet—but the poets belong chiefly to the future and the forte of these State books is the loving eye on the unchangeable past, not the dream of a streamlined future. The past makes good reading, however; at least you know where to find it.

IN "AMERICA, I PRESUME" (Howell, Soskin, $2), Wyndham Lewis impersonates a pukka sahib retired Anglo-Indian major, who comes to America as the husband of a successful mystery story writer. When Mr. Lewis remembers the character, he is as heavy as such majors are said to be. When he is himself, he is at least a witty conversationalist, sometimes a shrewd satirist, occasionally the man who wrote "Tarr." Coming down from Albany, Mr. Lewis (or the major) watched "a majestic river being insidiously captured by the night, and turning from milky steel to the dense blue black of Japanese porcelain." The great empty spaces of Washington looked to him "like the grounds of a phenomenally unpopular World's Fair." He is amusing about American accents, American indolence, the squalid lives of the American rich, "wiped out" by that man Roosevelt, who are growing poor gracefully with three servants in the kitchen; and he is a bit tiresome when self-consciously sparkling.

SENATOR BARKLEY

"We may adjourn. We may not. We may recess. We may not." But even the Democrats, says Mark Sullivan, believe the President will act less rashly if Congress remains in session

To Stay Or Not To Stay

By Mark Sullivan

Congress Torn Between Two Desires

ABOUT CONGRESS remaining in Washington, the possible answers are listed by the harassed Democratic leader of the Senate, Mr. Barkley. He accomplishes it in four, three-word sentences. Apparently, in the case of this Kentucky statesman, stress has a most unusual effect of terseness:

"We may adjourn. We may not. We may recess. We may not."

And those are not all the possibilities. There is a distinction between "adjourn" and "recess." If Congress "adjourns," that would be, in effect, suicide. At least, it would put its life in the hands of President Roosevelt. If Congress "adjourns," it could not come back to Washington of its own accord, but only on call by President Roosevelt. Excepting a call by the President, adjournment would mean the end of the existence of the present Congress. There would be no sitting of Congress until a new one comes into existence next January.

BY MERELY "recessing," Congress would keep control of its own life. Congress can recess for a given period, until a given day. During the past summer Congress recessed for the week of the Republican National Convention, and again for the Democratic convention.

At present, suggestions for recess take two forms. One is, recess for a few days at a time; the other is, recess until just after election, about November 15, and then return to Washington until the new Congress meets in January.

Of the parties in interest, Congress itself wishes either to recess or adjourn. It wishes strongly to go home. A third of the Senate and the whole House are up for re-election (except such as have been defeated in primaries or are retiring voluntarily.) Ordinarily Congressmen up for reelection already would have been campaigning for several weeks. That a member should remain in Washington while his opponent is scouring the district, seems an unjust handicap—unless his constituents, and the country as a whole, see that absence at Washington is, in the present condition, a virtue, and gives the member credit.

ASIDE FROM this one motive, Congress as a whole would prefer to stay here. Almost universally they feel that in the existing state of the world, the presence of Congress in Washington is desirable. It is not only that the rapid emergence of crisis after crisis, especially in the field of foreign relations, may on any day require action by Congress of a kind that cannot be anticipated. Further than that, Congress feels—and this includes both parties—that its presence here is a restraint upon the President, a check upon what his own party might call his impetuousness, and the opposing party might call by another word.

That Mr. Roosevelt would like Congress to go home, there need be little doubt; such a wish has been entertained by former Presidents, even in normal times. In a letter by Grover Cleveland, there was a phrase, later famous, that he had "Congress on my hands." The wish of Mr. Roosevelt to have a free hand is stronger, to the degree that the restlessness of Franklin Roosevelt differs from the stolidity of Grover Cleveland—which difference is great.

WEEKS AGO, in early June, when the ordinarily normal time for Congress to adjourn arrived, Mr. Roosevelt, at press conferences, twice made gestures in the spirit of "must you go—here's you hat." On June 4, and again June 11, he said, with just a faint shade of derision, that he saw no reason why Congress should remain in session; all they could do would be to make speeches. But Congress, then as now watchful about the President's impetuousness, remained here except for brief recesses.

That the judgment of Congress was superior to that of the President, is proved by the President's own actions. On three occasions, since the time he thought Congress might as well go home, he has asked Congress to pass legislation of extreme and immediate importance—defense appropriations amounting to over $5,000,000,000, authority to mobilize the National Guard, and the Conscription Act.

THE NEW DEALERS as a group, especially the more radical ones, are almost desperately anxious to get Congress out of town. They have a special reason—from their point of view an urgent reason. There are before Congress two measures which put restraint upon the innermost animating mechanism of the New Deal philosophy of society and government. The Walter-Logan bill would restore to the individual citizen a certain amount of right to appeal, and other protection against arbitrary action by agents of Government. A group of amendments to the Labor Relations Act would deprive the Labor Board of some of its present power to act in the triple capacity of prosecuting attorney, judge and executioner.

These labor law amendments, and the Walter-Logan bill have both passed the House, in both cases by votes of more than 2 to 1. Both measures are before the Senate. In all probability, both measures will be acted upon if Congress remains here. This the New Dealers wish to avoid.

Editorial Morals

I WANT TO REVEAL an example of the harmful effect of the New Deal's dishonesty on the editorial morals of a newspaper which is working that side of the street.

The Tribune of Tampa, Fla., has apologized to its readers for having published a recent column of mine wherein it was observed that "the American people long ago wearily abandoned principle and surrendered to the what-the-hell philosophy which holds that any crookedness short of downright criminality is all right if it is clever and produces results." "This spirit," it was remarked, "marks a great change since 1932 and 1933, when Americans still had the will and the morals to resent crookedness."

The Tribune says this shows that I hate Americans and promises that hereafter if my copy contains statements indicating that my miso-Americanism is a progressive paranoi it will not be printed. That is inexact. It is not Americans that I hate, but crookedness and publishers who condone this moral slackness.

THE TRIBUNE did not always hold the views expressed in this apology.

In the spring of 1938 the Tribune made a spirited expose of one of the most arrogant, corrupt and dishonest acts of the New Deal up to that time. But the New Deal got away with that one by sheer power and effrontery.

On that occasion a local grand jury returned the usual seasonal spring batch of indictments against local New Deal politicians in connection with the traditional Florida crime-must-go fiesta, which corresponds to the pagan harvest festivals. The foreman of the grand jury was a WPA worker who was instantly fired from the WPA with the explanation that there were no further funds available for his particular job. He appealed to the local court on the ground that the WPA politicians of the New Deal's State machine were trying to intimidate grand juries and the courts by punishing a grand jury foreman for doing his duty as a citizen. This threw a scare into the WPA political gang, and a few hours later they miraculously "found" the funds with which to retain the man on his job.

THE STATE WPA administrator, a New Deal machine politician, of course, was summoned to testify before a new local grand jury regarding this obvious attempt to coerce grand juries and the courts. He refused on the authority of Harry Hopkins in Washington, who held that no State agency could investigate a Federal agency. Even the Federal district attorney went to bat for the State administrator, thus bringing the Department of Justice into the play on the side of corruption and in opposition to civic decency in local government.

The proposition was that if you indicted New Deal WPA machine politicians you lost your WPA job, and the full effect of this was that any crooked New Deal politician, whether office holder or grafting contractor, was protected by the WPA from indictment in the State courts.

I MAY SAY HERE that these facts and this interpretation of them were expressed in the Tampa Tribune itself at that time. I might put some doubt on the purity of the Tribune's motives in fighting for the discharged WPA worker, however, because he had been a Tribune staff man, discharged for reasons of economy and thrown on the public treasury for support. The Tribune did not feel bound to keep him on the payroll but did feel a moral obligation to compel the Government to carry its social-economic responsibilities to the man.

I am not certain that such responsibilities do rest upon an employer, but the Tribune is bound to admit that they do, for that has been one of the favorite contentions of the New Deal ideologists, and the Tribune is a New Deal paper.

So it will be seen that the Tampa Tribune itself has now succumbed to the what-the-hell philosophy—a great change since as recently as 1938, when the paper still had "the will and the morals to resent crookedness."

British Text On Dakar

Hostility Toward French Disclaimed

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 25.—Tonight's ministry of information communique on the withdrawal of the Dakar attackers:

The circumstances which led to the expedition to Dakar are briefly as follows:

Gen. de Gaulle had good reason to believe from information which reached him that a large portion of the French population of Senegal supported the Free French movement and would welcome his arrival, and that a similar situation might be established there to that which exists in French Equatorial Africa.

He therefore proposed to His Majesty's Government that he should proceed there with some of the troops at his disposal with the good will and support of Great Britain.

His Majesty's Government were all the more ready to afford Gen. de Gaulle this support as information had reached them that German influence was spreading to Dakar.

Meanwhile, whilst the expedition was on passage, the Vichy government dispatched three cruisers from Toulin, which passed through the Straits of Gibraltar and eventually arrived at Dakar.

It is no part of the policy of His Majesty's Government to interfere with the movements of the French men-of-war, so long as they are not destined for any ports under German control.

For this reason, no hindrance was put in the way of the vessels in question passing through the Straits of Gibraltar. When, having done so, they pursued a southerly course, they were permitted to proceed. They therefore reached Dakar without interference.

WHEN, LATER, they put to sea again, steaming south, it was thought that they might be intending to interfere with the situation existing in French Equatorial Africa, which had already declared for Gen. de Gaulle.

Ships of the Royal Navy intercepted their passage and insisted upon their reversing their course, which they eventually did, two of them returning to Dakar and a third, which was suffering from engine trouble, being escorted by one of His Majesty's ships towards Casablanca.

On the morning of September 23, emissaries of Gen. de Gaulle, flying the Tri-Color and a white flag in order to show their French nationality and their peaceful intentions, attempted to land at Dakar and were met with a hostile reception, were fired upon and seriously wounded.

Batteries of the port opened fire on one of Gen. de Gaulle's warships and subsequently on His Majesty's ships, which were standing by in order to render Gen. de Gaulle support and assistance if needed.

Before returning the French fire, the admiral commanding made the following signal in plain language:

"Will be compelled to return fire unless fire ceases."

AS THE FIRE OF the shore batteries did not cease, fire was returned, and both His Majesty's ships and the shore batteries scored hits and incurred casualties.

Fire from the French battleship Richelieu was joined to that of the shore batteries, and consequently her fire had to be returned.

The British naval commander warned French authorities that submarines would be engaged if they left the harbor. In spite of this warning, three submarines made attacks on our ships and active measures had to be taken against them, with the result that two were sunk, but the entire crew of one were fortunately saved and will be repatriated at the first opportunity.

The forces of Gen. de Gaulle attempted to make a landing which was not successful, and when it became plain that only a major operation of war could secure the fall of Dakar, it was decided to discontinue hostilities, as it has never been the intention of His Majesty's government to enter into serious warlike operations against those Frenchmen who felt it their duty to obey the commands of the Vichy government.

Gen. de Gaulle himself was most anxious that he should not be the cause of bloodshed to his fellow countrymen.

The forces concerned are therefore being withdrawn from the region of Dakar.

Wilson Appointed Aide for McLean And His Estate

Justice Bolitha J. Laws of the District Court yesterday appointed Attorney John J. Wilson to care for Edward B. McLean and the $10,000,000 McLean estate. Wilson's bond was set at $50,000.

McLean, former Washington publisher and sportsman, was adjudged incompetent several years ago and his estate has been involved in a number of lawsuits. Justice Laws said he thought it better to appoint a lawyer with no previous connection with the case, because of the divergent views of those concerned about what ought to be done about legal problems.

Wilson formerly was chief of the criminal division of the District attorney's office and resigned last March. Attorney Neil Burkinshaw has been acting as a temporary committee for McLean.

Fred A. Leser Elected By St. Alban's Group

Fred A. Leser was elected director of the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew at St. Alban's Parish, Mount St. Albans, at its recent meeting.

Others chosen were Lannes M. Williams, vice director; Robert Ferguson, jr., secretary, and William C. Beck, treasurer. H. Lawrence Choate is counselor. The first regular meeting is set for Sunday at 9:30 a. m. in the rectory.

Fire Prevention Week Begins Here Oct. 6

The Commissioners yesterday requested Washington residents to observe the week of October 6 as Fire Prevention Week. Last year fires, many deemed preventable, took a toll of thousands of lives and destroyed $275,000,000 in property, they said.

Army Band Chiefs Ruled 'Artists' By House Vote

After a debate over whether Army Band leaders are primarily artists or soldiers, the House yesterday apparently accepted the former designation by sustaining a Presidential veto of a bill to grant the bandmasters commissions.

Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee led the move to upset the veto on the ground that conditions have changed since June 24, when President Roosevelt affixed the veto, and that the national emergency requires good martial music as well as bombers and tanks.

There are 74 bandmasters in the Army. The House bill would have given them ranks of first lieutenant and captain.

Curbs on Bombing Vain, Rotary Told

Ever since 1899, when a prohibition of bombing by balloon was proposed, peacemakers have sought to restrict aerial warfare in vain, and their chances of success now appear more remote than ever, the Washington Rotary Club was told yesterday by Howard S. LeRoy, attorney.

Since the first World War, numerous agreements have been adopted at international conference limiting air warfare but none is observed at present, the speaker said. Nor, he added, does it seem that anything can be done about it.

L. Bert Nye, president, presided over the weekly luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed 21 Years, Man Falls in Love With Widow and Her Son; His Wife Has Consented to Divorce, but He Hesitates to Hurt Her; He Asks, "Just What to Do?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Mine is a very serious problem. My wife and I have been married for 21 years. We have no children. About three months ago, I met a widow with a son, and fell deeply in love with both son and mother. You may say it isn't so. Or you may label it "infatuation." But I am stating the truth, as I feel it to be.

I do not want to hurt either of these very fine women, but whatever I decide, one must be hurt. It does seem a pity that such a thing should happen to three adults, each of whom is fundamentally considerate and kindly. I have asked my wife if she would grant me a divorce, and she said she would, if it would make me happy. But the thought of hurting her gives me pause.

No doubt you will tell me to put the widow out of mind. That is easy to say, but a great deal harder to do. We have tried to break off before now, but it seems we just cannot do it. However, we do at least try to control our feelings for each other when we meet, or when we are alone together. We see each other every day, either at work or at the homes of mutual friends.

Another thing: the boy and I get along together as though we were father and son. And don't try to tell me that I don't know anything about boys and girls. I know a great deal. I have nephews and nieces, none of whom has ever appealed to me as this youngster does, and I have been the head of a boys' organization, when I enjoyed the companionship of many nice youngsters, but never a boy whom I loved as I do this one.

In the past, I have talked of adopting a youngster, but my wife never would agree to it. This boy's mother lets him come and stay at our place, and it does seem like heaven to have him around. We take walks, play games together and enjoy the kind of understanding that few sons and fathers have. So please advise me just what to do. Respectfully,

H. M. C.

Man Must Decide Which Road to Take

DEAR H. M. C.: None can make your decision for you. Apparently your whole childless married life has been leading to this hour, when your strength and wisdom and courage were to be put to the acid test, in determining which road into the future it were best to take—the road of duty, on which you set your feet 21 years ago, or the new path that beckons, belatedly, over the ruins of your wife's happiness to the fulfillment of your passionate yearning for paternity.

As for your marriage, it does appear that there are elements of "incompatability" in the relationship. Your wife's consistent refusal to consider the proposition of "adopting a youngster" proves she doesn't share your love of children. It implies, indeed, a spirit of selfish noncooperation.

Yet, none can take responsibility for saying that you would be justified in—or that you would be happier for—displacing her at this late date, when you have met a woman who seems on short acquaintance to be a nearer approximation of your ideal mate. Even supposing it could be proved that your wife had deliberately conspired to keep the marriage childless (when you were capable of begetting children and she of bearing them)—still, your long-time fidelity in the face of her long-standing defection must be construed as "condoning" the offense.

Your fatherly devotion to the widow's son is a factor to be considered, of course. Yet—as someone has said—noble companionship is the most powerful constructive influence on a child's life and character. And you could make little pretension to lofty sentiment or exemplary behavior if you were to put aside the wife of your youth in order to marry another. To do so would be to set the boy an ignoble example of irresponsibility—at a period in his life when it probably would make an indelible impression.

Also, in view of your present indecisiveness, if you were to marry the widow, it is probable your conscience never would be entirely at ease thereafter. As time went on, you might become increasingly unsure as to whether you had made a praiseworthy move, in changing wives. Such self-distrust might develop finally into intense neurotic conflict; whereas, if you stick to the path of duty, peace of mind is sure to return to you in time.

The fact that your wife's offer to set you free, "if it would make you happy," immediately gave you pause, and caused you to shrink from the prospect of "hurting" her, suggests that you are more closely bound to her by sentimental ties than you realize. If you had really wanted to be free, you should have been off like a shot the moment her promise had been given. So it may be that you are passing, simply, through that "middle-aged madness" which seizes like fever on many men in their forties, and that your latent common sense is powerfully asserting itself, even so, to restrain you from making a rash mistake while the madness lasts.

As I said in the beginning, you must make your own decision; but, in the meantime, I would advise you to be more punctilious in your attitude toward the widow. You are insidiously jeopardizing the social security of both mother and son (whom you profess to love so much) in making the mother conspicuous party to an illicit courtship. Without further ado, make up your mind which road to take, and then stick to it. It is cruelly unfair to torment both women with your indecision. And that reminds me of what a profoundly wise older woman once remarked, to-wit: "A man who will let two women fight over him isn't worth any woman's devotion." M. H.

Indoor Flower Garden Will Cheer the Home

THINK OF IT! Your house a veritable indoor garden all winter, gay with flowering bulbs and graceful plants you can easily raise in water.

You have only to please them a little—some like their feet wet and some don't—and beautifully they repay you.

The lavender-hued Autumn crocus will bloom in a few weeks, placed in a bowl of water with fiber or pebbles supporting the bulb so that the water touches only its bottom.

Started at the same time, the fragrant paper white narcissus will bloom in early winter. Rest the bulb pebbles or fiber so that not more than a third of the bulb is under water. Then keep in a cool, dark place until the roots are at least an inch long.

By December the colorful French hyacinth will burst into flower. To be successful with hyacinths be sure the bulb is just above the water level but not quite touching.

Then, later, there are adorable lilies-of-the-valleys—and all winter you can enjoy greenery grown from root plants such as carrots, turnips, parsnips. The luxurious vine in the picture began life as a lowly sweet potato. Just place the potato stem end up in water so that the lower third is submerged.

Of course, you want potted favorites, too. In a window where there's full sunlight the ever-popular geranium will thrive. The exquisite African violet will do nicely with little sun.

Clothed in a Fortune of Pearls

There's a queen's ransom of precious pearls in the gown worn above by Hildegarde, famous New York chanteuse. One of the world's most expensive gowns, made of over 75,000 imperial cultured pearls, the costume is on display this week at a local store, where it is attracting long "ahs" of rapture. The gown was designed by Hattie Carnegie, famous creator of luxury clothes, along with a Lilly Dache hat encrusted with the precious gems. The value of the gown, not including Hildegarde, is $250,000, due largely to the three long years it took to assemble the pearls from the farms of the Imperial Pearl Syndicate in the Dutch East Indies. After a Nation-wide tour, the pearls will be auctioned off the gown, the proceeds going to charity. This is but one of the fabulous fashions on display today during an impressive fall fashion showing

Popularity Tricks On the Dance Floor

IF I were you Mary, I wouldn't worry too much about being stuck with one partner through several dances. It occasionally happens to even the most popular girl in any set. However, don't let it occur too often. When your beau takes you to a break dance, it embarasses him if no other man cuts in.

However, you might have avoided an awkward situation if you had been clever. As soon as you became stuck for two dances you got that unhappy look on your face that plainly said, "I'm stuck." Then all the boys were afraid to dance with you. You are a good dancer but your line of ballroom chatter is below par. Learn to say, light sweet nothings to your partner (but don't overdo it). Pretend to be having a good time. Laugh, smile, look gay and radiant even though you feel tight and drawn inside. Should your dancing partner be the talking kind let him talk and chime in with a few witty remarks when the conversation lags. In a few minutes the stag line will hasten to cut in to see why you are having so much fun.

Should this strategy fail bring out a few more tricks. After the first three dances, if no one breaks, suggest to your partner a stroll on the veranda or a lemonade. Stay out of the room until new couples or extra men arrive. Then go back and start dancing on a different part of the floor. More than likely someone will break soon. In that way the picture of a wallflower won't be impressed indeliably upon their minds.

If none of these tricks work, make a joke of being stuck. Or else lightly say, "Jim, if you don't do a bit of scouting around and introduce me to the men here, you're not going to get an opportunity to dance with that devastating red head." Jim should have at least one man friend who will dance with you while he brings other dancing partners during the evening. Go powder your nose and give him a chance to bring his friends to the rescue, if necessary.

The first requisite of getting a rush at a dance is to look as beautiful as possible. The second is to be able to dance well.

Stick to Diet Even If Pounds Cling

Every Day of Reduced Calories Helps, Even If It Doesn't Show

By Ida Jean Kain

REDUCERS are not consistently good losers. It would be very nice if you could count definitely on losing 2 pounds per week—but the pounds don't go according to schedule. A chart of your progress in slimming would probably resemble rickety flights of stairs. There would be a sharp decline, then a level; another decline, and perhaps another level.

After losing weight briskly for a few weeks, you are due for a standstill. Next week you may not lose a single ounce. You will begin to think about all the good food you are going without—and for what! A few more days of not losing and you will be in the mood to believe that you inherited your excess weight and that you are as slim as you can ever be.

These weight standstills are always a crucial point in the reducing program. It is so hard to keep on dieting when no weight is lost that the average reducer gives up. That's why there are so many overweights! But if you can manage to hold out you will eventually see an abrupt decline in your weight.

Time Will Bring Results

The scales to the contrary, you are making progress every day that you stay on your diet. It's a physiological law that if you keep your daily calories below the number you use in energy, you are forced to draw on stored fat. in time the loss will be registered on the scales.

There are several explanations for this lull in losing. Perhaps you have taken off all the soft, easy-to-lose fat. Or perhaps your system is economizing on energy. After several weeks on a diet your system adjusts to the lower food intake and you actually require less food. In order to resume losing, it may be necessary to further lower the calories—say from 1,200 to 1,000 per day. Now that you are accustomed to your diet, this cut should not seem very drastic.

During the standstill it is of the utmost importance that you continue regular exercise. Not only will regular exercise help in stabilizing your weight at the new figure, but it will trim off the inches in spite of the balky scales.

Water May Be the Cause

A weight standstill at this point is not the worst thing that can happen to a reducer. The worst thing that can happen is to go on a diet and not be able to start losing. This unhappy introduction to slimming is caused by the storage of water in the tissues along with the reduction of fat, so that the loss in weight cannot be registered.

When the water balance is adjusted to normal, the scales will take a dive, but that may not occur for a couple of weeks. Water retention may sometimes be prevented by an increase in the protein of the diet. The daily menus may be made to include two servings of lean meat, two eggs, a serving of cheese, and a glass of skim milk or buttermilk, in addition to the vegetables, fruits and amounts of bread and butter specified.

Thoughts on a Shopping Tour

We-l-l, I suppose I did pay too much for that hat—still, nothing's as important as your hat. And a really smart woman would pay as much for her hat as for everything else combined. That's it! I'll save on everything else! . . . Why, nothing else really matters if you have the right hat.

I wonder where all these dumb biddies come from who amble along, getting in everybody's way. How do they ever get anywhere in the world? . . . Still, they're all better dressed than I am. For that matter, show me just one woman in a hurry who's wearing any unblended, pedigreed silver foxes . . .

Oh, well, anyway, women ought to be licensed to ride escalators or go through revolving doors. They ought to carry neat little cards stating "This is to certify that Mrs. John Blank has sufficient mental agility, etc." . . .

My, I'm tired! Of course, the thing that wears me out shopping is that I don't have enough money to spend and have to hunt and hunt. Now, other women—— Oh, there I go! Why won't I ever grow up? Anyway, I can sit down when I try on shoes. And I'm going to be very firm. Yes, very firm. That's just what's the matter with this country today—people living beyond their means.

We-l-l, it's funny how things always cost just a little more than you had planned. Still, I had to have my feet comfortable. And I didn't want them to look too big. And shoes are important—they say that's the first thing a man notices . . . Oh, well, I'll save on everything else. If you have a good hat and a good pair of shoes, you really don't need another thing.

How immersed all these women are in their own little dreams as they go about their shopping! Every thought focused on a happy tomorrow to be achieved by a necklace . . . a veil . . . a blouse . . . a dress . . .

I wonder if a light beige dress wouldn't be better for me than a brown. I could wear some green beads . . . no, maybe a black with Benedictine brown accents would be better . . . or else gold with copper . . .

Oh, there I go! I-I-I . . . Why am I thinking about myself and my petty adornments when women in England are—— Oh, I won't think of it! I simply mustn't! . . . Of course, people have to have clothes . . . but, some way, I feel so guilty . . . Anyway, I'll be very firm about a dress.

We-l-l, I suppose, after all, it was the thing to do . . . It never pays to buy too cheap dresses. And you can't tell what will happen by next year. And I do look so shabby—— Oh, if I hadn't run into Sonia Glyde! . . . And for me to lose my head and start apologizing . . . It was so cheap!

I wonder if the war really came closer . . . home, would it wash such trivial snobbery out of our souls . . . give us all a truer sense of values? . . . And would clerks in higher-priced merchandise still look down their noses as they directed customers to be the "downstairs store?"

Who on earth is that turtle-necked woman in the mirror? . . . Good heavens; it's—— Oh, I didn't realize I walked that way! . . . I must hunt up those Ida Jean Kain exercises I cut out . . . just as soon as I get home.

What lovely beads! They would be a lot for my beige dress . . . Still, I had intended to get all my costume jewelry at the 10-cent store . . . Especially since I paid so much for everything else. Now I'm simply going to be firm about gadgets! That's the thing that's ruining this country today . . . Still . . . a good piece of costume jewelry is really an investment . . . and of course I could save on everything else . . .

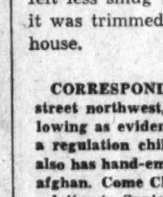
That's it! I'll buy the beads and then I won't get that ice cream soda. Just get a coke . . . And another thing, I won't go home in a taxi. I'll just take a streetcar!

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

From a Cow Barn to Swank Mansions, Gertrude Sawyer Has Designed Them All

GERTRUDE SAWYER is one architect who needn't worry about a change in housing styles. During her 17 years in Washington, she has designed the swank Junior League headquarters on Massachusetts avenue, restored old Georgetown mansions and even engineered a cow barn. The only job she ever balked at was a duck blind. "I was afraid the owner would blame me for every duck he missed," she explains.



Gertrude Sawyer

"I like to think I don't belong to a 'school.' It's more fun to do houses of all styles. Besides, so much depends on the client; a house should be built around the needs and the personality of the people who are to live in it." Her first job resulted from a sporting proposition. Her father, who had his doubts about the future of a woman architect, bought some land for which she was to design a house. The profits were to be hers, the losses his. They sold the house at a profit, and he gave his consent to her career.

She supervises the construction of the homes she designs, and finds the workmen give her full cooperation. She carried the cooperation too far on one humiliating occasion. In showing the men how she wanted a flagstone terrace rearranged, she tried to lift one of the stones herself. "It didn't budge," she says. "Never again!"

WRONG NUMBER—A girl who thought she was dialing her fiance's rooming house, the number of which is DEcatur 0161, accidentally was connected with DEcatur 0616. Without realizing her mistake, she said to the woman who answered, "I'd like to speak to Mr. Collins, but if he's asleep, please don't disturb him." The woman replied with perfect composure, "I believe you have the wrong number. This is St. Mary's Cemetery."

Evelyn Henderson, Western Union employe, is Washington's only professional anniversary-rememberer. Her job is to pore over the previous year's file of congratulatory messages. Several days before the birthday or wedding anniversary rolls around again, and usually before the sender remembers the date himself and buys a greeting card, he receives a notice: "We tied a string around our finger to remind you of the approaching anniversary of someone you remembered on the same occasion last year." Attached is a telegram form already addressed, bearing a selection of form messages appropriate to the occasion. Miss Henderson sends out about 1,200 of these memory-joggers every month.

Preparing to go out to lunch with a friend who is in the florist business, a girl suddenly remembered she was wearing a handsome artificial camellia. She removed it and went on her way, congratulating herself on sacrificing style to diplomacy. She felt less smug when she met her friend and noticed her hat; it was trimmed with forget-me-nots that never saw a greenhouse.

CORRESPONDENCE—Mrs. D. Harlow Reed, of 319 Webster street northwest, believes she has an unusual dog and cites the following as evidence: Boy breakfasts with his master and mistress in a regulation child's high chair, and has perfect table manners. He also has hand-embroidered bath towels, bath powders and a crocheted afghan. Come Christmas time, he not only sends out cards, but writes a letter to Santa Claus and checks carefully on the result.

India Prints Will Be Scarce Due to War

Are Used Widely For Bed Spreads And Wall Hangings

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

News that the war is causing a serious shortage of India prints in this country is worrying many importers. Especially now that the college students are looking for them to use as bedspreads, wall hangings and curtains in dormitory rooms.

One of the reasons that early navigators began to search for a shorter route to India was because the whole Western world coveted the bright cotton prints made in India. Indeed most of our ideas on cotton printing come from India, as do the very names for so many of our cotton fabrics, such as chintz, calico, madras. At one time in England an India calico bedspread was worth as much as £30.

Not only did India develop wonderful processes for printing cotton cloth in clear lovely colors, being probably the first to perfect fine dye sources, but it had from earliest times to the present produced cotton cloth of highest excellence. Indians learned to weave it to such grossamer sheerness that a piece 20 yards long and 1 yard wide could be passed through a finger ring—indeed it was often called "woven air" or "evening dew." On the other hand it was the one fiber with such strength that it could be made into heavy sail cloth capable of buffeting the winds of the seas.

Although the patterns familiar in India prints have an individual character, they are in fact rather cosmopolitan, being influenced by many outside sources. Persian, Assyrian, Chinese motifs were early intermingled with those of India until it is difficult today to discover where many of these actually originated. In modern times Western markets have also made their mark on these prints. And yet for all that, they retain an essential quality that is India. Typical motifs include the tree of life surrounded by fanciful birds, foliage and flowers, the pine, the elephant, the lotus bud, the honeysuckle, many of these in highly fanciful interpretations.

Pearl Buck Here Today For Embassy Reception

Novelist, However, Plans to Return Tonight To New York After Presenting Chinese Envoy With Copy of Her 'Book of Hope'

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WASHINGTONIANS WHO had hoped Pearl Buck, the noted novelist due in town today, would stay over the week-end, are doomed to disappointment. She is expected here shortly before time for the reception at the Chinese Embassy this afternoon, and she will return to New York tonight. However, she will stay here long enough to be feted at a dinner to be given by the Chinese Ambassador tonight.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

This afternoon's party will begin at 4:30 p. m., as you know, and will run for two hours, but the ceremony at which Miss Buck will present the "Book of Hope" to her old friend, the Chinese Ambassador, is set for 5 o'clock. Mrs. Roosevelt, who heads the list of sponsors for the Women's Committee of Tribute to China, is returning to Washington today and is expected to be present. The book to be handed over to Dr. Hu Shih is a history of the committee and is to be forwarded to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek in Chungking.

Incidentally, did you know that Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's brother is in Washington for a few days? Well, his mission isn't being publicized and he is staying very much out of the spotlight. But his name is T. V. Soong, and his wife is one of the most attractive women I've seen around these parts lately.

LITERARY NOTE: Grace Zaring Stone, author of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," is back in town, but you needn't expect any books soon from her talented pen. She told me yesterday that her life recently has been too active, and that novelizing takes more peace and quiet than she has enjoyed in a long time. She and her husband, Capt. Ellis Stone, former naval attache of our Embassy in Paris, recently returned from war-torn Europe, accompanied by their daughter, Baroness Perenyi, of Hungary.

Although rumors have been freely circulated that Mrs. Stone wrote the best-selling novel, "Escape," under the name of Ethel Vance, she says her last book was "The Cold Journey," published several years ago. Since then, she has found time to turn out a few short stories but no novels.

While Capt. Stone is awaiting orders, he and his wife and daughter have an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. Chances are Mrs. Stone and Baroness Perenyi will stay on there through the winter. Later, Baroness Perenyi hopes to rejoin her husband in Hungary.

SOCIAL INSTRUCTION: Don't make the mistake of pronouncing the name of the new French Ambassador, Henri-Haye, to rhyme with "way." Just say "on-ree eye" and you'll have it about right . . . Don't address Mrs. J. Borden Harriman as "Mme. Minister." She doesn't like it . . . It is permissible to speak of an Ambassador's wife as an "ambassadress," but it is seldom done by the Right People . . . If you're a stickler for the correct thing, don't call a Representative a Congressman . . . And don't, for goodness sakes don't, send items to a society editor in an envelope addressed "The Social Bureau." (I refuse to be a bureau).

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: New Speaker of the House Sam Reyburn has the ladies of the press on his trail—and no mistake about it. The Women's National Press Club had scarcely obtained his promise to be honor guest at their next luncheon than the Newspaper Women's Club invited him to a tea tomorrow afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel at 5 o'clock. The luncheon appointment is set for the Willard Hotel on Tuesday . . . Speaking of a Capitol Hill notable reminds me—a Washington correspondent for a string of New England newspapers yesterday received this telegram from one of his several bosses: "Understand Mrs. Rogers is to explain position on floor of House. Please cover." . . . Mrs. William Chapin Huntington returned to Washington from New York yesterday afternoon . . . Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady are moving from their apartment at The Highlands to 2139 Wyoming avenue . . . Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kent Legare, who spent most of the summer at their place in Simsbury, Conn., have returned to their home here at 2343 S street.

If Dr. and Mrs. Dana Coman, now on a honeymoon trip to Mexico, should suddenly decide to open a gift shop, they could do so easily—what with all those handsome wedding presents still on display at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George R. Holmes. A dozen silver trays, exquisite glassware and china, and an heirloom lace banquet cloth that belonged to a duchess are only a few of the lovely items in the display. But the two gifts that impressed me most were a crayon portrait of the late George Holmes sent to the bride by the artist, Henry Rittenberg; and—from Louise Noonan Miller—an antique gold frame for a picture of George as a child.

Betrothal Announced

Hessler Studio.

MISS CLARISSA MARY MORIARTY, whose parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. M. Moriarty, of Chicopee, Mass., announce her engagement to William Louis Hughes, son of Harry E. Hughes, of Washington. Miss Moriarty received her A. B. degree from Trinity College in Washington in 1939. Mr. Hughes was graduated from Catholic University in 1937 with the degree of bachelor of chemical engineering, and at present, is a senior at Georgetown Law School. No date has been set for the wedding

Red Cross Tea At Mrs. Bliss' Attended by 200

Dumbarton Oaks Scene of Gay Event; Fall Styles Shown Off

Against the stately background of Dumbarton Oaks yesterday afternoon approximately 200 women and three men, members of the Red Cross Volunteers gathered for tea at one of the first social affairs to punctuate the annual Roll Call.

While not in any sense of the word planned as a fashion show, many of the committee members disregarded the threatening weather, and as a result the event brought to the fore a number of new autumn accents in hats, frocks and jewelry.

Hostess for the afternoon was Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who received at the entrance of the dining room of her home together with Miss Mabel Boardman, who has for many years been the guiding spirit of the Red Cross.

Miss Boardman Smartly Gowned

Miss Boardman was smartly turned out in a navy blue and white print topped by a redingote of navy blue and matching hat and accessories. The hostess appeared in a street length frock of fine eyelet rabbits-wool in beige shade. With it she wore earrings, pin and necklace of jade, and pale yellow kid gloves. As a further accent three of her own garden roses were caught in the belt of the dress.

Dominating the center of the room was the dining table, centered by a bowl of blended autumn flowers, and large vases around the room held other gay bouquets.

Officiating at one end of the tea table was Mrs. Hugh Wilson, whose husband, the former Ambassador to Germany, is now Special Assistant to the Secretary of State. Mrs. Wilson, smartly turned out in black, topped her outfit with a chic matching pancake hat. At the other end of the table was Mrs. Homer Case, also in black with a fetching postillion hat, whose frock was accented with an intricate necklace of East Indian handwrought silver.

Others who poured during the afternoon included Mrs. James Clement Dunn, whose black outfit was topped by a small brimmed red felt hat; Mrs. Edgar Morris, whose black frock had accents of royal blue to match her veiled halo hat; Mrs. E. G. Montgomery and Mrs. James K. McClintock, the latter wearing a frock of soft blue, the blouse of which was patterned effectively in steel beads.

Many Arrive During Afternoon

Miss Fannie Herr, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John K. Herr, arrived with Miss Ann Parker, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank Parker, both of them looking like fashion models in their sprightly fall outfits. Miss Herr's black frock was laced criss-cross down the front with turkey-red, which was matched in her veiled callot. Miss Parker topped her gray wool frock with a short blue fox chubby and a chrome yellow turban.

Others having a cup of tea and a bit of conversation during the afternoon were Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Raymond C. Dunn, Mrs. Arthur Harris, who with Col. Harris has just moved into their new home on Woodland drive; Mrs. Barnet Nover, and many more.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THE WASHINGTON WINTER promises to be the most interesting in years, with all sorts of people, from Republicans to refugees, flocking here. Among the many coming to work for the national defense, it's reported, is John Hay Whitney.

DUDLEY HARMON

The well-known sportsman who, in recent years, has gone in for backing movies ("Gone With the Wind" was one of his more lucrative ventures) is said to be looking around for a house. Anyway, with so many "blitzkrieg widows" settling down here, it's beginning to be news when a man joins the circle.

MRS. ERNEST ANGELL returned to New York yesterday after lunching with Mrs. Arthur Krock. Mrs. Angell and her husband have just bought a farm at Newtown, Conn., and she has been getting her furniture out of storage here.

YET ANOTHER American refugee from Paris (but not from the Ritz Bar), has arrived in town. Miss Carolyn Nash, who used to winter in Europe, is at the Carlton and will live there this season.

As an ambulance driver for the American Hospital at Neuilly, Miss Nash left Paris some time after the German occupation. She reports that the hospital is still carrying on but doesn't know how long it will be able to.

JUST BEFORE she left Paris the Germans said "Be sure and tell Americans how nice we are." To get gas to drive her ambulance, Miss Nash had to work with the victors. Accompanied by a German nurse, she visited several prison camps, taking loaves of bread and crates of oranges to the hungry men. She reports that a few have been allowed to return to work the farms, and that others, mechanics for instance, were set free to repair water mains and other war damage. But hundreds of thousands remain, living in condemned buildings or with no shelter at all.

After motoring to Lisbon to catch the Clipper, Miss Nash gave away her car. The bigger your automobile, and the more gas it uses, the less you can get for it, she says, and magnificent Rolls Royces are going for $25.

EVIE ROBERT'S latest enthusiasm is going to fights. The other night, before the match at Griffith Stadium, she asked a few friends in for a drink and a club sandwich at her Mayflower apartment. Then we piled into taxis and went to sit out under the stars at the Stadium.

Seen here and there: Commissioner Hazen in a ringside seat next to Evie . . . Tom Morgan, boxing commissioner . . . Senators Byrnes and Robert Reynolds . . . Mickey Rooney, a center of attention . . . Gladstone Williams, the Frank Waldrops and many others, mostly men. But though the women were in the minority, they outyelled the males.

AN ENGAGEMENT of much interest will be announced on Sunday. The two principals are a popular post-deb and the son of a diplomatic couple . . . Luncheon outdoors by th fountain in Rockefeller Plaza the other day we caught a glimpse of Mrs. Marion Warburg. She says she'll return here the end of the week . . . Though Ambassador Biddle recently leased a large house near Philadelphia, it's probable that he and his wife will rejoin the Polish government in London. Mrs. Biddle told of her experiences in Poland in a speech at a Democratic rally a few days ago in Pittsburgh.

COUNTESS DE GRAMONT has had no word from her husband, who is fighting with Gen. de Gaulle, since her return to Washington last month. While quite naturally she hasn't seen the present French Ambassador, the Petain representative, she finds that her husband's decision to join the general has happily made no difference to her long-time friendships with the embassy staff.

Younger Set Plans Week-End At Skytop Club

Several members of the younger set will go to Skytop, Pa., the week-end of October 5 to stay at the Skytop Club.

The Misses Patricia Hill, Mary Theresa Norris and Molly Stonestreet and Charles Grant, William O. Shelton, jr., and Frank O'Neil are going, chaperoned by Mrs. Philip Twing. Plans for the week-end include an outdoor buffet luncheon party at Robin Hood Dell on the Skytop estate and a dance in the pine room of Skytop Lodge. The young people will also enjoy tennis, golf and riding.

Lady Latham Here At the Mayflower

Lady Patricia Latham, whose husband is Baronet of Crow Clump, is in town for a few days and is at the Mayflower.

Parties Honor J. L. Smith, Jr., Madeline Cotter

Round of Fetes Include Luncheon Given by Mrs. Hartson

A flurry of parties are keeping Miss Madeline Cotter and John Lewis Smith, jr., and attendants for the wedding on the go. The couple will be married on October 3 at noon in St. Matthew's Cathedral with a reception to follow at the Mayflower Hotel. Miss Cotter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cotter.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Nelson Hartson entertained at a luncheon party for Miss Cotter, who will have her three sisters, the Misses Dorothy, Margaret and Clair Cotter as attendants. Although Margaret is convalescing from an illness she hopes to be up and about in time for the ceremony.

Also in the wedding party will be Miss Cassie Parker and Isabel Johnson. Mrs. Robert J. O'Conner Coffey, who will be matron of honor, will entertain at a dinner party next Wednesday evening with her husband, Dr. Coffey, in honor of the couple. The party will follow the rehearsal.

This evening Miss Nancy Hoskinson will entertain at a dinner party. Tomorrow a tea dance will be given by Dick Lyons in honor of the popular couple.

On Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. John Parker will entertain at a dinner and dance for members of the bridal party at the Chevy Chase Club. Sunday afternoon Mrs. Cotter has invited friends of the prospective bride and bridegroom to tea at the Cotter farm in Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming—he will be best man in the ceremony—will entertain at cocktails at their home on Monday afternoon.

Raleigh Dances Begin Tonight

A number of well-known Washingtonians have made reservations for the opening dinner-dance at the Pall Mall Room, Hotel Raleigh, at 8 o'clock this evening.

Among those who will entertain parties are Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson, Maj. and Mrs. J. Craig King, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Hillyer, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd D. W. S. Andersons Visiting in N. Y.

The Director of Naval Intelligence, Rear Admiral Walter S Anderson, and Mrs. Anderson left Washington yesterday for a brief visit to New York. They will return Sunday.

Early next week the Andersons will welcome to Washington their old friends, Consul General Earl Russell, of Johannesburg, South Africa; Mrs. Russell and son, Earl, jr. Mr. Russell will report to the State Department for final instructions before returning to his post in Johannesburg. For the past six months the Russells have been on home leave in the United States. They will sail from New York early in October.

Stratton Anderson, son of Admiral and Mrs. Anderson, is now in Johannesburg, where he has been for the past year and a half as vice consul and assistant to Mr. Russell.

Miss Babbitt To Be Bride

Several from Washington will be members of Miss Constance Babbitt's wedding party when she is married on Saturday in Walpole, N. H., to Thomas Lvingston Turner, son of Mrs. Thomas Caldwell Turner, of Washington.

Miss Babbit has chosen her sister, Miss Sarah Babbitt, for her maid of honor. Her other attendants will be Mrs. Edgar Ormie, jr., Miss Gertrude Good and Miss Anne Turner, sister of Mr. Turner, all of this city; Mrs. Guy Mercer, of Evanston, Ill., and the Misses Marion Barney, of Chicago, and Carolyn Pierce, of Milton, Mass. Gardner L. Boothe, of New York and Alexandria, will be best man for Mr. Turner.

Luncheon Given By Mrs. Herrick At Her Home

Mrs. Samuel Herrick entertained informally yesterday at luncheon at her residence on Indian Lane.

Her guests were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Charles Brand, Miss Helen Moody and Mrs. Brent Clark.

Mrs. Herrick is looking forward to making the acquaintance of her new grandson, born recently in Puerto Rico. The child has been named Philip Herrick, jr. The young Herricks went over a year ago to Puerto Rico, where Mr. Herrick is with the Wages and Hours Board.

Miss Audrey Campbell, who has been visiting Mrs. Joseph Leiter on the Massachusetts North Shore, plans to return to Washington next week. She will open her home on Reservoir road upon her arrival.

Mrs. Leiter, who with her daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter, has been summering at her place in Beverly Farms, Mass., has set no definite date for her return to the city.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt will be honor guest at a dinner to be given tonight at the Carlton by the Women's National Democratic Club.

Prince and Princess Guido Pignatelli have come to Washington from Newport and are staying at the Mayflower. They will return to Newport shortly for the remainder of the autumn season.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Piscator have opened their apartment at the Wardman Park after spending the summer in nearby Maryland.

Paul G. Ledig will sail tomorrow for Huancayo, Peru, where he will direct the magnetic observatory of the Carnegie Institute of Washington. With his son, Paul, he was honor guest at a reception given recently by the choir of the Luther Place Memorial Church, where he has been tenor soloist for the last five years. Hostesses were Mrs. Mitchell A. Marques, Miss Theresa Hemmelman and Miss Grace Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Cox, of Springfield, Ill., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Moreschi at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Ian Wilson-Young, who for several weeks has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Donald W. Brown, of Cooperstown, N. Y., is returning to England on the Yankee Clipper. She spent a few hours in Washington last week renewing friendships made when she lived here several years ago. Her husband is a British diplomat and they are living in London.

Mrs. Barnett To Fete Duchess At Wakefield

Mrs. George Barnett is planning an afternoon party on Sunday, October 6, at Wakefield, her home in Front Royal, Va., in honor of the Duchess de Crussol. The duchess, with her young son, has arrived here from Paris and is stopping with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Alexander Gordon, in Rappahannock County, Va.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Gordon entertained at a luncheon at her home, Kenmore, for her visitor who was the former Miss Evalyn Gordon, of Georgia.

Mrs. Barnett will have as her guest shortly Mrs. Henry L. Bemis, of Palm Beach, who plans to spend next month in White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Hartley Back From Summer Home

Mrs. Livingston Hartley has returned to her home in Georgetown after spending the summer at Nonquitt, Mass.

Mr. Hartley has deserted Washington this year except for week-ends. He has given up most of his writing to work with William Allen White's Committee to Defend America By Aiding the Allies. Mr. Hartley has an important position in the New York office of the organization.

Madame Chairman

TOMORROW AFTERNOON the 200 delegates from the District who attended the twenty-third triennial session of the General Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, in San Francisco, will return from the West aboard the Anna W. Smalley special. They wound up their visit on the Pacific Coast with trips to the national parks, Bonneville Dam, the Columbia River highway and to Hollywood.

The trip of the convention delegates has been under the general direction of a committee headed by Past Grand Matron Helen D. Robbins and Past Grand Patrons Harry J. Schmidt, F. Frank Kimmel and Edward N. Riley.

Mrs. Flora E. Campbell, past worthy grand matron of the District, a life member of Martha Chapter and honorary member of Lebanon, was reelected right worthy grand treasurer. Mrs. Minnie E. Keyes serves again as right worthy grand secretary, conducing the business of the general grand chapter from the headquarters in the old Belmont mansion on Eighteenth street. Mrs. Keyes, who is past grand matron of the Grand Chapter of Michigan, has become as much a part of local Eastern Star life as any member of the jurisdiction, since coming here.

Mrs. Minnie J. Burdine, who is now worthy matron of the District, on her return to Washington, with other grand officers, will be busy for the rest of the year making official visits to each of the 40 chapters. These visitations will begin October 8 with that to Lebanon Chapter, the largest in Washington, which has a membership of 750. There are 11,000 members of the order in the District.

The General Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star embraces four sovereign bodies, the General Grand Chapter, the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland, and two independent jurisdictions, New York and New Jersey. Forty-five jurisdictions maintain educational loan funds. There are also 50 Masonic and Eastern Star Homes, of which the one at 6000 New Hampshire avenue northeast is typical.

HOUSE WARMING—Beta Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority, at the University of Maryland, last night had a house warming at its chapter house, 7057 Princeton avenue, College Park, Md. The chapter was installed at Maryland only last April, so this will be the first season the girls have had a sorority home.

There are ten girls and the house mother, Mrs. Harry Franklin, living there. Edith Christensen is president of the sorority and the committee in charge last night included Evelyn Foerster, Lydia Ewing and Margaret Clarke.

MONTGOMERY LEAGUE TO MEET—The Montgomery County League of Women Voters will have its opening luncheon tomorrow at 12:30 at the Manor Country Club, with representatives of the county, State and national league as speakers. Mrs. Minier Hostetler, the president, will announce the year's program and a new voting machine will be demonstrated. Out in Maryland the League of Women Voters really can cast a ballot.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Hostetler, whose home is in Rockville, are: Mrs. E. M. Willis, of Edgemoor, first vice president; Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, of Bethesda, second vice president; Mrs. P. G. Morehouse, of Silver Spring, treasurer; Mrs. Clarence Hendrickson, of Chevy Chase, recording secretary; Mrs. Francis B. Leech, of Rockville, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, of Bethesda, parliamentarian.

G. A. R. STARTS—The junior State board, Children of the American Revolution, of the District, will hold its first meeting of the season on Sunday, at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. C. H. Giroux, 3620 Sixteenth street. Graham T. Smallwood, jr., State president, will preside.

The senior State board will give a card party on Friday, October 18, at 8 p. m., at the D. A. R. Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. C. H. Lambert, the chairman, will be assisted at the cake table by Mrs. H. C. Grove and at the candy table by Mrs. R. M. De Shazo.

PLAN MEMBERHIP DRIVE—Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, department membership chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary in the District, has announced that, although November is the official membership month of the National Auxiliary, she is launching an early drive in an effort to enlist all eligible members into the auxiliary, of which Mrs. Helen M. McCabe is president this year.

To stimulate enrollment, Mrs. Warren is offering a prize to the member who brings in the most new members to each unit. The department vice presidents are also offering awards for membership.

Mrs. McCabe has set the membership goal of the department at 2,500 this year.

Mrs. Betty Lee Bush, department chairman of Girls' Nation, will hold a meeting on October 5, the time and place to be announced shortly, at which Miss Helen Zaruba, the newly elected president of Girls' Nation, will preside. All eligible members of Girls' Nation will be asked to help in plans for their participation in the presidents' and secretaries' conference, to be held on October 19, at the U. S. Department of Commerce auditorium.

Stroke Fatal To Former Baroness Here

VON PAGENHARDT

Former Baroness Marie von Pagenhardt, 43, of 2415 Foxhall road northwest, died unexpectedly yesterday at Gargeld Hospital.

The wife of Maximilian von Pagenhardt, former German nobleman who is now an American citizen and a consulting engineer here, she was taken to the hospital Tuesday night when she lapsed into a coma after complaining of a severe headache.

It was at first thought she had taken an overdose of headache medicine, but an autopsy yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, city coroner, found the cause of death to be apoplexy.

The Von Pagenhardts had lived in Washington since 1923. The former Marie Dupuy Adams, of St. Louis, she was married to the baron in 1918, a year after he went to St. Louis as a naval architect and consulting engineer.

The baron came to this country in 1910 and was naturalized eight years ago, renouncing his title and allegiance to Germany.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Von Pagenhardt leaves one son, Robert, a student at St. Alban's School.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at St. Alban's Chapel, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Machine to Clean Flax May Boost Income of South

Atlanta, Sept. 25 (AP).—Engineers at the Georgia School of Technology announced today a method had been perfected for removing wood from flax fiber by machinery and for spinning the fiber upon machinery now used in cotton mills.

Dr. Harold Bunger said the new process would remove the main obstacle preventing Southern farmers from growing flax at a profit. Work on the device was started five years ago at the request of officials of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Economists said successful operation of the new machine would free the United States of its dependence upon imported flax, and the National Defense Commission asked the school to make tests of the newly processed flax fiber in parachute webbing.

Astrologer Reads Judge's Horoscope—Cleared of Fortune Telling of astrology. She said she was a graduate of Oxford College and had studied astronomy and navigation before branching out into astrology.

"What can you tell me from this: 11 p. m. March 7, 1903, Washington, D. C.?" Judge Newman asked the defendant. The hour, it was learned, was that of the justice's birth.

Miss Bartleman plotted several lines on a chart and consulted several volumes which had been admitted in evidence, before asking if she should read the chart.

"If it won't be libelous," Judge Newman declared.

"It might be embarrassing here," she replied.

"I want all or nothing."

It was then Miss Bartleman told the judge of the troubles she saw in the chart.

She described the horoscope, which had not been identified as the judge's, as "a most heartbreaking and heartrending chart."

A woman, she said, is the greatest influence in the subject's life; his suffering began a year ago and will continue about two years more.

But man "is like gold tempered with fire"—through suffering he develops into the most kindly person, Miss Bartleman went on.

She found that many of the subject's troubles, which he "suffered in silence," were caused by financial difficulties.

On the brighter side the astrologer saw "a great man in the making," "tremendous success" ahead and "many wonderful, influential friends, many more than he realizes."

She said the subject of the chart never gambled or speculated, would never do anything dishonorable, was very sensitive and very dramatic in his "approach to life."

Severe criticism of Judge Newman's conduct on the bench resulted in a Department of Justice investigation last year. He was exonerated last February.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Ralph Quinter prosecuted the fortune-telling case, and Miss Bartleman was represented by Godfrey Munter.

Miss Bartleman, interviewed at her home last night, described Judge Newman's horoscope as "the saddest chart I ever looked at." When she learned it was the judge's, she said, "I was so sorry."

A writer of children's stories by profession, Miss Bartleman lives in an apartment furnished with what is considered one of the best private collections of antiques in Washington. All of the pieces, as well as a number of first editions in her library, were inherited from her early Pennsylvania forebears.

She Told Hitler

Widely traveled, she attended the 1936 Olympics and while in Europe gained an audience with Hitler, she said, through a German acquaintance she had known in Oxford. She plotted the Fuehrer's horoscope and read it to him, she said.

Then, she reported, Hitler asked her what periods would be most favorable for moves toward Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark and Norway. She said she told him and he followed her counsel in each case. But, modestly, she explained:

"Doubtless he consulted other astrologers, too."

Msgr. F. J. Sheen Attacks Political 'Dishonesty'

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University, Washington, D. C., today declared it was "an offense against justice to use illegitimate means to further even an honest political end, such as continuance in any public office."

Msgr. Sheen, in a sermon at the annual "red mass" of the Catholic Lawyers' Guild, called for a "realization that there are two kinds of dishonesty in politics: dishonesty of money and dishonesty of power."

He did not mention any specific individual.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Relief Stamp Plan May Increase Retail Business Here $1,000,000

$75,000 Required For Relief System Here, Officials Say

Operation of the food stamp plan in Washington would require a revolving fund of $75,000 and would bring more than $1,000,000 to retail business, local officials yesterday learned in Baltimore from welfare officials.

Commissioners David McCoach, jr., and John Russell Young and Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, who made the trip to Baltimore to study operation of the plan there, returned with the conviction Washington should have a similar plan.

Welfare officials have asked the Commissioners to provide $150,000 in the 1942 budget to set the plan in operation. It is understood the Department of Agriculture, which controls the stamp plan through its Surplus Marketing Administration, is ready to approve Washington as a food stamp city. About 163 cities have the plan and about 1,000 cities have applied for it.

Plan Succeeds in Baltimore

Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore welcomed the Commissioners and Bondy, and assured them the plan has been a "tremendous success."

Under the plan, a relief family is permitted to buy a minimum of $1 in orange stamps per person per week, and with each $1 purchase he receives 50 cents in blue stamps free. With the orange stamps the client may purchase any commodity in the grocery store. The blue stamps may be used only to purchase surplus commodities, which are specified each month by the Secretary of Agriculture. The food stamp plan is another method of distributing surplus commodities.

Washington, according to Bondy, has 19,000 persons who would be eligible to purchase the food stamps. The Commissioners were informed they could figure on $4 a case as the amount required to set up the revolving fund. The fund is needed to set the plan into operation. For example, if the Commissioners decide favorably on the plan and appropriate the $75,000, the Board of Public Welfare would purchase $75,000 in orange stamps from the Department of Agriculture and would receive half that amount in blue stamps.

Schools Would Not Be Cut Off

In Baltimore a family of five on general relief receives a weekly check of $7.87 for food. The family is then entitled to a minimum of $5 in orange stamps for the week and is given free $2.50 worth of blue stamps. The family, however, may purchase up to $1.50 per person, or a total of $7.50 in orange stamps.

Approval of the plan would not mean that surplus commodities would no longer be forthcoming to local institutions or the school lunch project, Bondy said. He said he had the verbal assurance of Agriculture officials surplus commodities would be sent to this city for distribution to institutions and schools. However, Commissioner McCoach asked him "to get this in writing."

Discussion of the plan came up last week when welfare officials appeared before the Commissioners to justify next year's budget. One item was the $150,000 fund for the stamp plan. It was suggested the fund be taken from the general relief fund of $900,000. When the plan was indorsed last session by the Commissioners, it gained the support of the Senate but was thrown out by conferees.

Surplus foods available to relief clients in Baltimore grocery stores for the present month include butter, raisins, rice, lard, pork, cornmeal, eggs, prunes, hominy grits, dry beans, wheat flour, whole-wheat flour, oranges, apples, pears, peaches, beets, cabbage, celery, lettuce and tomatoes.

It was said the food-stamp plan not only provides the family with a greater variety of foods, but also provides more food than the old plan.

D. C. Insurance Bill Passed by Senate

Measure Would Lower Requirements On Certain Types

The Senate yesterday passed by unanimous consent an amended House bill to give the District its first adequate law for the regulation of fire, marine, casualty, and title insurance business. The measure passed the House May 13.

The action was taken on motion of Senator Danaher (Democrat), of Connecticut, who offered one of the uncontested amendments. The principal Senate change was to eliminate a requirement that policy holders withhold half of premium owed to unlicensed insurance companies and turn it over to District insurance superintendent. Lloyd's, the internationally known insurance organization, is permitted to obtain a District license through a second amendment.

The legislation now goes to conference and an agreement is expected.

Under the present law, according to District officials, companies writing fire and casualty insurance in Washington are not prohibited from discriminating between policy holders in rates or forms of policies and no qualifications are required either for a company or an agent to do business.

The proposed new act would modify the capital and surplus requirements of companies writing fire and casualty insurance to put them on par with life insurance companies.

The new law will not necessitate any additional expenditures to administer, officials said, and is expected to return additional revenue through a $10 fee for examination of agents and brokers.

BishopLeonard Stresses Work Of Evangelists

Methodist Prelate Addresses Rally At Douglas Church

He shared the afternoon program with Dr. John C. Millian, executive secretary of the Baltimore Conference Board of Education; Dr. Edgar C. Beery, East Washington District superintendent; D. Stewart Patterson, conference lay leader, and Methodist Temperance Board official; O. O. Thomen, District lay official; Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, pastor of Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church, and Dr. Frank Steelman, Petworth Methodist cleric.

Speaking from the pulpit of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Eleventh and H streets northeast, the prelate said that, while personal evangelism was "most difficult," no clergyman can be successful in public evangelism unless he has been first successful in the personal contact.

Bishop Leonard, who also addressed the rally's worship rites last night, prefaced his earlier message with an outline of conference plans for the fall and winter. Special regional meetings for leaders of religious education, lay and other activities, and East and West Washington District conferences are being considered, he pointed out.

(A short time ago the Washington area of the denomination was divided into East and West Washington districts, with Thirteenth street northwest as dividing line.)

Dr. Millian, opening speaker during the afternoon, called Christian education a "pillar of the church, and urged his audience to take stock of its value and significance. Dr. Sexsmith, discussing the Methodist mission program, pictured the church as "reaching out in a very difficult time . . . with tremendous opportunities in the days that lie ahead."

150 Honor Charles E. Russell, Who Fights for Minorities

Colored and white, Protestant, Catholic and Jew came last night to the testimonial dinner given by the Inter-Racial Committee to pay tribute to Charles Edward Russell who spent a lifetime fighting for oppressed minorities.

The occasion was Russell's eightieth birthday.

There was one other who joined the 150 in the gymnasium of the Y. W. C. A., 901 Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was a short, broad-shouldered man whom few at the banquet knew and who was only referred to as "a man who would not even have been able to be here had it not been for Charles Edward Russell."

He was Charles Harris, who in 1935 sat in District Jail condemned to die for the murder of Milton (Milsie) Henry. He sat last night near the rear of the hall, a free man, through the efforts of a group of Washington citizens led by Russell. President Roosevelt commuted Harris' sentence to life and, a few months ago, granted him full pardon.

When the long succession of speakers had finished their praise, Russell, newspaper reporter, author and champion of many causes, pulled himself up from his deep chair at the center of the head table and said in a choked voice:

"Good friends . . . here I am an old campaigner who has gone up and down the country yelling his head off, seldom at a loss for a word, and all I can say to you is that I am overwhelmed. You must understand how I feel without my telling you."

Then he began to use words of counsel, speaking as a ring-wise fighter who sees himself approaching the days of his retirement:

"Your tribute is to the eternal cause of man . . . a kind of condensation of the cause that you love . . . In the cause of man there is no such thing as defeat. . . . Perseverance is the essential for victory and we must keep on no matter how long the road may seem."

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, spoke first. He traced Russell's career from city editor in his teens of a paper at Davenport, Iowa, edited by his father, through his years as a New York reporter covering the big news events of the 1890's.

"A few newspapermen," Meyer said, "look beyond the surface to reality. They want to know why the things that happen do happen, whether it is a crime of passion or a political deal or an epidemic.

"And some of them go even further. They want to do something about it. Charles Edward Russell was one of these."

Meyer observed that Russell once ran for President of the United States, and when the audience applauded, turned to the honored guest and said:

"You should have been elected."

John F. Finerty, New York attorney who was identified with Russell and Eamon De Valera in the fight for Irish freedom, said Russell was "one of the few men who understands that there can be no freedom for one race or at the expense of one individual."

Severiano Concepcion, secretary of the Committee on Philippine Independence, spoke of Russell as "one American who was a friend of Philippine independence when many of us had no idea of what independence meant."

"Here is a man," declared Rabbi Isadore Breslau, executive director of the Zionist Organization of America," who in the truest sense may be called the brother of all of us . . . who often has out-Zioned the Zionists."

"It is the spirit of that man that says: 'No compromise with justice'," declared Charles H. Houston, former dean of Howard University Law School. "In helping to bring the Negro to manhood's estate he has helped America more than he has the Negro."

The Rev. Halley B. Taylor, pastor of the Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, was toastmaster, and John Lovell, jr., executive secretary of the local branch of the National Association for the Protection of Colored People, read greetings to Russell from Robert Brennan, the Irish Minister, and from notables in Maine, California and China.

Rover and Short Address Mass Meeting for Willkie

Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney, and Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, were the principal speakers last night at a Willkie-McNary mass meeting held in the auditorium of the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church.

Rover described Willkie as the type of man needed in the presidency to make the country economically strong, judging from his record in the business world. Short scored President Roosevelt for pro-British leanings and his spending-lending program.

Other speakers were the Rev. E. C. Smith, Rama Gibson, Dr. Charles H. Marshall, Hayden G. Page, Dr. John R. Francis, Henry Lincoln Johnson, Joseph C. McGarrity, Dr. C. E. Murray and Dr. Emmett J. Scott, who read a letter of felicitations from Joseph W. Martin, jr., chairman of the Republican National committee.

Danes to Observe King's Birthday Quietly Today

Three hundred Washingtonians of Danish descent will gather at the Danish Legation today for solemn ceremonies marking the seventieth birthday of King Christian X, ruler of a Nazi-subjugated land.

While the King passes the day quietly with the royal family in Copenhagen, surrounded by German troops, Washington's Danes will drink a toast to his health and join Danish Minister Henrik Kauffmann in a prayer for the re-establishment of an independent Denmark. The reception will be from 5 to 7 p. m.

Motorist Held For Grand Jury In Man's Death

Charles N. Thompson Charged at Inquest With Negligence

Charles N. Thompson, 31, of Arlington, yesterday was held for grand jury action after a coroner's inquest into the traffic death of Berry Minnis, colored, of 1717 Webster street northwest. Thompson was charged under the traffic act with "gross negligence" and "utter disregard for the rights of others."

As an anti-climax, Thompson discovered his car, parked downtown, had been stolen during the hearing.

Minnis, who was 52, was fatally injured Sunday at Sixteenth and Webster streets northwest, by a car admittedly driven by Thompson. For the first time, testimony at an inquest was offered by members of the new police accident investigation squad.

Herrick Testifies

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he was "highly pleased" with the presentation of evidence which resulted in sending Thompson before the grand jury.

Principal testimony was offered by Policeman Donald Herwick, member of the new unit. He told the coroner's jury that the odor of alcohol was evident on Thompson's breath and that the defendant admitted drinking "a couple of beers."

Investigation at the accident scene showed that Minnis was hurled 39 feet by the impact, Herwick said. The man, witnesses told Herwick, was crossing Sixteenth street, from east to west, and within the crosswalk. He was struck while in the center of the street and thrown to the southwest curb of Webster street, Herwick testified.

Witnessed Accident

Skid marks measured 48 feet 3 inches, the inquest was told. Tests were made showing the skid marks in the street came from Thompson's car, Herwick said, and other stopping tests at the legal 30 miles an hour speed indicated Thompson's automobile was traveling in excess of the speed limit.

John A. Ruane, 1632 Webster street, said he was standing on the west side of Sixteenth street and saw Minnis crossing within the crosswalk. He said he didn't see Thompson's car until the man was struck.

Rhode Island Ave. Liquor Store Robbers Get $200

Two hatless colored men in raincoats robbed a liquor store at 1327 Rhode Island avenue northwest of $200 last night after forcing the manager, at the point of a gun, to lie on the floor.

Arthur Lane, 22, of 1495 Saratoga avenue northeast, was alone in the shop when they entered.

Meanwhile, James Y. Eaton, of 1314 Hamlin street northeast, was struck on the head with a sandbag and robbed of a brief case containing $19 in postal savings certificates by two colored men who accosted him on Virginia avenue between First and Second streets southeast.

Wanda Wyatt, of 2110 Nineteenth street northwest, lost her pocketbook containing $4 to a colored purse snatcher in front of her home.

Cool Weather Brought by Storm To Remain Today

The fringe of a storm along the Eastern coast swept through Washington yesterday, depressing the mercury 18 degrees in an hour and drenching the city with 1 inch of rain.

The sudden temperature drop occurred between 11 a. m. and noon when the mercury fell from 72 to 55. Yesterday's high was 73 and low was 49 at 10 p. m. Continued cool weather was due today, with a rise expected tomorrow.

The rain caught quite a few Washingtonians off guard yesterday because they preferred to believe the daily forecast—which predicted clear skies—as against the four-day forecast—which scheduled rain. The Weather Bureau explained the discrepancy thus: A typist had written "fair" instead of the correctly forecasted "rain" on the daily report.

Washington Girl Becomes A Great-Aunt at Age of 8

Central figure in a kinship tangle as complex as a genealogy chart, 8-year-old Rita King today is probably the youngest great-aunt in the United States.

Not only is Rita the great-aunt of a child born last week; she is the aunt of Albert Campbell, of 8 I street northwest who saw the light of day 11 years before her.

The situation stems from the fact Rita's mother, married Albert King, a Standard Brands Co., official, when she was 12 years and 8 months old, the middle-aged great-grandmother says.

Following in her mother's footsteps, Mrs. King's eldest daughter, Mildred, was wed to Charles Campbell when she was only 14.

Albert Campbell, their son and the father of one-week-old Patricia Campbell, also married early—when he was 18.

Although Mrs. King bore Rita eight years ago—11 years after Albert Campbell was born—the little girl is the new father's aunt and his baby's great-aunt.

Last night Rita accepted her unusual status cautiously. Asked to describe her sensations at being so youthful a great-aunt, the Gage School grader declared: "I haven't been it long enough to find out."

DraftRepeal Urged At Peace Meeting

Repeal of the conscription law was urged last night by speakers at a meeting of the Washington Peace Mobilization, which met in the Thomson school.

In an election of permanent officers, Hudson Wells was named president; Sarah V. Montgomery, secretary-treasurer; the Rev. Joseph A. Edwards, Lucy Hancock, James Harris, Myrtle Powell, Lois Sentman, Jack Zucker and Costas Alexiou, vice presidents.

Note on Pigeon's Leg Is Police 'Mystery'

Washington police last night were attempting to solve "The Mystery of the Coded Note."

The note was attached to the leg of a pigeon, which flew into the dry-cleaning store at 3511 Twelfth street northeast. Mrs. Jennie De Waters, proprietor, who found the exhausted bird and note, called police. Police refused to make public the homing pigeon's number until the mystery was cleared.

Tigers Win Two as Indians Down Browns

Newsom Is Victor in Both Games

'Bashful' Buck Relieves in 10-to-9 Opener, Goes Route In 3-2 Nightcap

By the United Press

Detroit, Sept. 25.—The rampaging Detroit Tigers today conquered their worst jinx, the Chicago White Sox, in both ends of a double-header to come within two jumps of the American League pennant.

Buck Newsom, ace of the Detroit pitching staff, waddled out of the bullpen to hurl the last two frames of the ten-inning opener and win his twentieth game, 10-9, then went the route in the nightcap to edge the Sox 3-2 and hang up No. 21.

The triumphs, the first over Chicago in ten games, shot Detroit to two full games ahead of the Cleveland Indians, whom the Tigers need to whip only once in their three-game series this week-end to gain at least a tie for the title.

Hank Finds Range

Hampered by an aging, decrepit infield which manages to get one out where it might get two, and a farm system shot to pieces last spring by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, Detroit's paradox of baseball tonight was on the threshold of one of sportdom's oddest triumphs.

But today's victories hardly needed a backdrop to prove the Tigers had the fight to win when the big metal scoreboard at Briggs Stadium read against them, and they were batting against a pitcher who fooled them inning after inning.

There was some doubt they would pull the second game out of the fire when young John Rigney, a nemesis for Detroit, threw them only one hit in the first six innings. But finally Hank Greenberg, big Detroit outfielder, found the range and hammered a fast ball across the left-field fence near the 400-foot mark for his forty-first home run of the season. It tied the score 2-all and set the stage for the climax in the eighth.

Runs Dime a Dozen

Barney McCosky, with one out, lined a single to left to start the winning rally. Charley Gehringer, his aging bones creaking in the cold winds of late evening, stepped to the plate and slapped another hit over second. Greenberg was purposely walked and Rudy York sent a long fly to center, which let McCosky trot home after the catch.

There were two types of baseball to delight 21,566 shivering Detroiters who still are too stunned to realize their club is by far the best bet to take the pennant they last saw waving here in 1935. Rigney, giving up only five hits, and Newsom, permitting only seven, gave them one of a pitchers' battle, but the first game was a wild, slipshod affair with runs a dime a dozen.

Tommy Bridges, Al Benton, Dizzy Trout, and Newsom paraded into the pitcher's box for Detroit in an attempt to halt Chicago's 17-hit attack. Only Newsom was able to stop it, so the Tigers relied on their own belting power to smash out a victory.

Twice the Tigers came from behind to pass the Sox. They finally tied the score 9-all in the eighth and with the ninth coming up Manager Del Baker beckoned to Newsom. He set the Sox down with one safety in the ninth and tenth while Clint Brown, who had replaced Thornton Lee, was the victim in the last of the tenth.

McCosky singled, advanced on Gehringer's infield out, paused while Greenberg was intentionally passed, and romped home on York's

Gold Cup Winner of 1939 Back in Town With Rabbit's Foot

All President's Cup Entries Expected Today

Sloppy Weather Stops 1939 Winner From Trial Spin

All of the eight or nine preliminary starters in the President's Cup race of the President's Cup Regatta will be on the scene by sundown today, eagerly awaiting the big event, which this season is expected to be wide open.

Official entries in both the outboard races, which get under way over the Potomac tomorrow at 12:10 p. m., and in the inborad events which will hold sway on Saturday and Sunday, were released yesterday by R. Aubrey Bogley, regatta race chairman, and showed record fields.

"Zamie" Simmons' My Sin, the 1939 Gold Cup champion, again failed to take to the water for a trial spin because of the sloppy weather. Simmons and his mechanic, Stanley Sergeant, said they might postpone the test until early tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile Miss Syndicate, the tried and trusty veteran owned by Horace Dodge, reached town in a special truck and was taken over to the pits by the new airport adjacent to the racing course. Dodge and his mechanic and pilot are expected early this morning.

Pilot "Means Business"

Dan Arena, Detroit pilot for Herb Mendelson's Notre Dame, reported at regatta headquarters at the Willard Hotel, and informed Chairman Bogley he "meant business this season."

Arena was at the controls of Notre Dame when she was beaten out by Harold Wilson's Miss Canada III last season. He said Notre Dame would arrive early this morning, and Mendelson would be in this afternoon.

Mendelson's Notre Dame won in 1935 and again in 1937. Mendelson's 64.516 miles per hour in 1937 is the best for the President's Cup. Count Theodore Rossi did 62.285 with Alagi the following season.

The third boat with a chance of repeating is Sidney Allen's Hotsy Totsy, which fooled everyone by winning the Gold Cup at Northport, Long Island., but the time was exceedingly slow.

Hotsy Totsy Won in 1930

Hotsy Totsy won the first President's Cup in 1930. It was owned then by Dick Hoyt and the late Vic Kleisrath.

No official confirmation regarding his presence here has come from Gar Wood, jr., who plans to enter his Tinker Toy. It is apparent that Wood is having trouble finding a new motor for his boat, and, unless he gets one, Wood will be scratched from the big race, as well as the outboards.

The first of the outboard races begin tomorrow at 12:10. Some 145 outboard aces are entered—a record field.

The U. S. Coast Guard Patrol Commander, C. A. A. Anderson, yesterday issued the following statements:

"In the interest of safety to life and property on the water, the Georgetown Channel of the Potomac River will be closed to navigation on the occasion of the President's Cup Regatta on the following dates: September 27, 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.; September 28, 9 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.; September 29, 9 a. m. to 6:30 p. m."

Many Favorites Fall In Women's Amateur

Betty Jameson Shaky But Wins as Marion Miley, Dorothy Traung Lose; Mrs. Davey Bows

By the Associated Press

Del Monte, Calif., Sept. 25.—Favorites tumbled all over the Pebble Beach course in second and third rounds of the forty-fourth annual National Amateur Women's Golf Championship today, only the defending titleholder running true to form.

Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., who won the crown last year and warmed up for the present tournament by capturing the Western title two weeks ago, failed to electrify the gallery with her brand of golf, but she won both her matches.

After defeating Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., 1 up in the morning, she eliminated Mrs. Mary Mozel Wagner, of Portland, Oreg., 5 and 4, in the third round.

While the Texas girl was struggling through two mediocre rounds, 12 strokes over par for the 32 holes she played, such favored stars as Medalist Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco; Peggy Graham, of Hollywood; Nancy Hurst, of Portland, Oreg.; Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, Tex.; Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., and Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., were bounced out of the running.

Mrs. Myron Davey, Washington, D. C.'s lone qualifier, was eliminated, 5 and 3, in the morning round by Grace Amory, of Glen Head, N. Y. Miss Amory was eliminated in the afternoon by Clara Callender, 4 and 2.

Georgia Tainter, a 17-year-old Fargo, N. Dak., girl making her first appearance in national competition, caused the qualifying leader, Miss Traung, all the grief. The latter won, 2 and 1, after Miss Traung had shot the first nine of the third round in par 38 to hold a 1-up lead.

Miss Tainter got going on the second nine with a birdie and two pars on the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth holes, to grab the match. She finished three over par against four over for her rival.

Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., slender but decidedly effective in hitting long, straight shots, eliminated Miss Graham in the second round, 2 and 1, and followed with an equally impressiv- win over Bea Barrett, experienced player from Minnetonka Beach, Minn., 4 and 2.

Pebble Beach's own entry, Mary Morse, trod over her home course to send two favored opponents to the sidelines. The Stanford University coed defeated Miss Hurst, 2 and 1, and followed this upset with a 1-up victory over the Texas and Southern titleholder, Mrs. Goldthwaite, in the third round.

Miss Hicks, a solid contender for the last few years, was an unexpected loser in the second round to Mrs. Wagner, 3 and 1.

Quarterfinal meetings tomorrow bring together the Misses Tainter and Cothran; Miss Morse and Mrs. James Ferrie, of Pasadena, Miss Callender and Mrs. Willard Shepherd, Beverly Hills, Calif., and Miss Jameson and Mrs. Lifur.

Challedon to Race In $15,000 'Graw' Feature Saturday

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 25.—In a surprise move, owner W. L. Brann sent word late today that Challedon will be a starter in the $15,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap, Saturday's closing feature. Trainer Don Cameron will ship the mighty son of Challenger II here tomorrow for the test of 1 mile and one-eighth. Challedon will carry 130 pounds and will be ridden by Jockey Georgie Woolf.

Until Racing Secretary Charles McLennan received word that Challedon would go, it was believed that Brann had ordered the horse withdrawn due to the weight assignment.

Grid Cardinals Upset Chicago Bears, 21 to 7

Coach Conzelman's Charges Play Inspired Football

By the United Press

Chicago, Sept. 25.—Chicago's much-abused Cardinals, suddenly brought to life by Coach Jimmy Conzelman in his first season in the National League, toppled the mighty Chicago Bears tonight, 21 to 7, with one of those inspired performances that only a hopeless underdog can achieve.

To the 23,181 spectators in Comiskey Park, the Cardinals were out there just to keep the score down against the powerhouse that only last Sunday crushed the world champion Green Bay Packers, 41 to 10.

The lean and victory hungary Cardinals had other ideas. They pushed over touchdowns in the first, second and fourth period, halted two furious drives by the Bears inside their own 10-yard line and only once let a Bear back drive across their goal.

All the rough spots in the new Cardinal attack were ironed out by two tough tie games and the Cards were in rolling mood from the first minute of play. They marched 61 yards down field with the opening kickoff and didn't quit hammering until Rookie Hugh McCullough had whipped a 21-yard pass into the end zone to Freshman John Hall. Tyro Lou Zontini converted from placement.

First down, on their own 31, the Cards called a deep reverse with Lloyd Madden, of the Colorado School of Mines, Nation's highest collegiate scorer last season, on the lugging end. He skirted wide around his own left end, shot into the clear and was on his way. Sixty-two yards he sprinted until two Bears angling across the field cut him short.

Al Milnar Hurls Tribe To Victory

Chapman's Single Produces Two Runs In 4-2 Game, Tribe Still in Flag Race

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 25.—Big Al Milnar pumped a hypodermic into Cleveland's lagging pennant hopes today with a 4-to-2 football-weather triumph over the St. Louis Browns.

The Indian southpaw plucked his seventeenth victory out of a raw fall wind which made the outfielders dervish under fly balls, kept the crowd to 2,000 overcoated stick-to-the-finishers and once blew over Catcher Bob Swift as he crouched to give a signal.

A two-run single by Ben Chapman, Indians' leftfielder, kept the Tribe in the race. Pitcher Vernon Kennedy, long-time Cleveland jinx, momentarily lost control in the fourth with two Indians dead. Ken Keltner shook the icicles off his bat and dropped a pop single into short left center to start the uprising. Then came walks to Ray Mack, Frankie Pytlak and Milnar, scoring Keltner. Chapman's one-baser plated Mack and Pytlak.

Weatherly Scores in First

That made it 4-0 for the Tribe, which had taken a one-run lead in the first quicker than you could say long underwear. Roy Weatherly and Lou Boudreau banged out singles and Weatherly scored on Hal Trosky's grounder.

The Brownies, although they would have been more comfortable in their heated dressing room, continued to peck away at Milnar, winding up with six hits to seven for the Injuns.

The first St. Louis tally came in the fifth. Milnar walked Johnny Berardino on a three and one pitch and Swift sent him home with a double to center. Singles by Don Heffner and Wally Judnich put Heffner on third in the eighth and he tallied on Harlond Clift's dipsy-doodle fly to center.

Clubs Draw in Victories

The chilled players concluded the hostilities in a snappy hour and 40 minutes for an even break in the two-game series, and a draw at 11 victories apiece for the season.

About the only one who wasn't frozen in the almost empty stadium seemed to be Bob Feller, ace of the Indians' mound staff who gets Oscar Vitt's call to open the three-game Detroit series here Friday.

Everybody else ducked to the dressing rooms after the last out, but Feller appeared on the field for a brief pitching workout. Then he, too, gave in to the 50-degree temperature.

New York Misses Million by 11,025

New York, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The Yankees fell 11,025 short of drawing a million paid attendance to Yankee Stadium this year.

President Ed Barrow announced today that the attendance for 76 games (one was rained out and moved to Washington) was 988,975. This figure was well over last year's attendance generally conceded to have been slightly over the 900,000 mark.

Golf Body Head Totes Bags for Champion Little

Boston, Sept. 25 (AP).—Lawson Little, the National Open golf champion, has set a new high in caddies.

Before leaving here today for New York, Little revealed that Hal Pierce, president of the United States Golf Association, had toted his bag during an exhibition round yesterday on the Country Club course, where he won the National Amateur in 1934.

Reason: All the regular caddies had gone to the American Legion parade.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Even before they know their fate in the 1940 World Series against the American League, the Cincinnati Reds are already a remarkable team. They are the first National League club ever to recover from a four-straight beating by the Yankees to the extent of winning the pennant in the following year.

Five time since 1927, the Yankees crushed the National League World Series entry in four straight games and it was getting to be traditional that no National League pennant winner ever repeated the following year after one of those grand-slam lickings by the Yanks. The Yankees did something to those National League pennant winners besides beating 'em. They sort of crushed the spirit that is deemed so necessary to a winning club.

Until the Reds surged back to another National League pennant this year, clubs that took one of those four-straight lacings seemed foredoomed to failure in their own league the following season. The Pirates of 1927 dropped to fourth place in 1928. The pennant-winning Cards of 1928 were a poor fourth in 1929 after their encounter with the Yanks on the World Series battleground. The Cubs of '32 finished third in '33. The Cub team of 1938 which couldn't win a World Series game from the Yanks, finished fourth the next season.

But the Reds seem to be a different sort of National League team. Not only did they bounce back from that Yankee crusher, but they won the pennant again by the greatest margin of any National League winner in recent years. Bill McKechnie's club breezed home. It shook off an early challenge by the Dodgers and made a farce out of the pennant race.

Even during their defeats by the Yankees last fall, there were indications that the Reds were a team apart from the ordinary National League pennant winners who had gently folded before the Yankee onslaught in previous years. A game-by-game analysis of the 1939 World Series reflects no great discredit on the Reds. They weren't exactly outclassed by the Yankees.

The only game of the 1939 series which the Reds couldn't have won was the second in which Monte Pearson shut them out, 4 to 0. That day, Pearson was simply a better pitcher than Bucky Walter and no team can win a ball game when it doesn't get runs (copyright).

Perhaps the most painful defeat suffered by the Reds in last year's World Series was in the opening game when Paul Derringer lost a 2-to-1 decision to Red Ruffing. Without any reflection on Ruffing's feat that day, it can be noted that Derringer actually outpitched him. One of the Yankees' runs was very much tainted, and Derringer was licked when Bill Dickey broke the tie with a center field single. Blame that defeat on Manager Bill McKechnie. Anybody in the American League could have told him that the man batting in front of Dickey was never to be purposely passed to bring the Yankee catcher to the plate. Everybody save McKechnie probably knew that Dickey was more dangerous than anybody in the Yankee batting order except Joe DiMaggio when the tying or winning run was in scoring position.

The Reds were licked in the third game of the series for one very plain reason. Charley Keller was hot. He hit two home runs to ice the game for the Yankees. He hasn't been hot since but he wrecked the Reds that afternoon.

As late as the eighth inning of the last game the Reds were in front. A bobbled double play by the Cincinnati infield on a ground ball by the slow-footed Dickey, and a tragic injury to big Ernie Lombardi beat the Reds. By that time, perhaps, the jitters had set in, and the Reds were fair game for the Yanks but actually it was no rout.

Already the gentlemen who calculate the betting odds on the World Series are paying tribute to this Cincinnati team of 1940. The earliest quotations rate the Reds as 7 to 5 favorites to beat any American League team which is able to poke its collective head into the series. Be it the Tigers, Indians or Yankees, the Reds will be the favorites—the first time a National League club has had that preseries honor since the Cardinals of 1934, featuring Dizzy and Daffy Dean, took the field against the Detroit Tigers.

The reason for the favoritism of the Reds in the 1940 series is obvious enough and it is two-fold, (1) Bucky Walters and (2) Paul Derringer. Only Bob Feller in the American League rates with this pair as a pitcher. No American League club would be able to summon the one-two pitching punch that Derringer and Walters represent to the Reds.

In a short series, even in a series that goes seven games, the edge indubitably lies with the club that can muster the best pitching. Walters and Derringer worked three of the four games last year. They could work two games each in a five-game series, and in a seven-game series they would be available for at least five games. The Red menace this time is real.

WILLIAMSON GRID RATINGS:

S. M. U. Picked Over Uclans; Mich. Is Choice

By Paul B. Williamson

Despite the fact that a number of the "big boys" in college football are setting forth with games which might backfire in their faces, the Williamson system is rushing right out to lead with the chin when it comes to the headliners.

We take Southern Methodist over U. C. L. A.; Michigan over California; Washington over Minnesota; North Carolina over Wake Forest; Ohio State over Pittsburgh; Texas Aggies over Texas A. & I.; Tulane over Boston College, and Duke over V. M. I.

The Bruins will have a slight advantage over Southern Methodist in that they are playing on their home grounds.

There'll be a lot of other close ones in the major circuits; namely, Mississippi over L. S. U.; North Carolina State over Davidson; Stanford over San Francisco; Navy over William and Mary, and Gonzaga over St. Mary's of California.

In safer territory with the remaining big-time games, the Williamson system makes no pretense at hesitation in picking V. P. I. over Marshall; N. Y. U. over Penn Military College; Kansas State over Emporia Teachers, and Purdue over Butler.

We picked Colorado to be champions of the Rocky Mountains Big Seven this year, and they have hopes of toppling Texas.

Misty Isle Wins Matron Stakes

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Racing through a driving wind and rain before one of the smallest crowds of the New York season, Joseph E. Widener's Misty Isle outlasted Herbert M. Woolf's Unquote by a head to take the $15,710 major share of the thirty-fourth running of the Matron Stakes, for juvenile fillies, here today. Carrying top-weight of the dozen starters under 119 pounds, the chestnut daughter of Sickle splashed 6 furlongs of the flooded but firm-bottomed Widener straightaway in 1:10 2-5 to pay favorite players $6.20 for $2.

Unquote, coupled with Silvestra and close second choice, was second by five lengths, while Silvestra was an easy third. Pomayya was fourth.

The record low attendance for the New York season is 4,780, recorded on the second day of the Saratoga meeting. Today, 5,336 hardy souls, a new low for Belmont, withstood the worst weather of the season to watch the various events.

Misty Isle, second to King Cole in the recent Babylon Handicap at Aqueduct, fought it out with Unquote all the way. The Woolf filly held a narrow advantage most of the trip, but Wayne Wright urged Misty Isle to the front as they fought it out in the closing strides. Silvestra wore down Pellise, then staved off Pomayya for the show.

Three College Elevens Open Seasons Here This Week-End

Roanoke Tests Hoyas Saturday

Play Under Lights At Griffith Stadium; Hagerty Announces Starting Line-ups

Thrown for a loss by a driving rain, Georgetown University's football machine went to work inside yesterday, and Coach Jack Hagerty whipped together a starting line-up for Saturday night's opening game with Roanoke College at Griffith Stadium.

A surprise selection came with the disclosure that Chris Pavich, 170-pound sophomore, will start at left end. Pavich is the only sophomore in Hagerty's starting list and will team up with Art Lemke, at the other wing.

Refusing to take the Roanoke encounter lightly, Hagerty will have two backfields to alternate Saturday night.

The forward wall will include Al Matuza at center, Ed McMahon and Augie Lio at the guards, and Earl Fullilove and Joe Daniels at the tackles.

In the opening backfield, Joe McFadden will call signals from the quarterback spot, Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas will be at the halves and Jim Castiglia will handle the fullback assignment.

Hagerty's second backfield will consist of Al Kull and Jack Doolan, half backs, Bill McLaughlin, fullback, all sophomores, and Lou Falcone, a junior, at quarterback.

The Hoyas will stage their final bit of hard work today at 3 p. m. at the Hilltop when Hagerty will send out the freshmen against the big Hoya line. The yearlings will be armed with Roanoke plays and will try to repeat their previous success of cracking the G. U. line.

Lee, Olsen Win Two for Cubs Over Pirates

Chicago Creeps Up On First Division Spot With 2-1, 6-4, Victories

By International News Service

Chicago, Sept. 25.—The Chicago Cubs crept close to the first division today by taking two games from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2-1 in 11 innings and 6-4.

Bill Lee got the verdict over Rip Sewell in the first game when Rip walked Stanley Hack with the bases loaded in the last inning. One big inning decided the second game when the Cubs routed Mace Brown.

Yankees, Nats To Play Rained OutGameSaturday

The Yanks and Nats will play yesterday's called-off game as part of a double-header here Saturday, it was announced yesterday. Rain caused postponement of the game in New York. Another game is listed for Sunday, the last of the season.

The last three games of the campaign may have a strong bearing on the outcome of the pennant race. The Yanks have a chance to tie for the bunting if the Indians beat the Tigers twice in their three-game series, beginning Friday—and New York wins all six of their remaining games, two with the Athletics today, one tomorrow and the three with the Nats.

Automotive Manager Note

All managers of the Automotive Baseball League are requested to meet tonight at Stewart's Pharmacy, Sixteenth and U streets northwest, to discuss final plans for the season's final games Sunday.

All-Star Polo Game Listed Here October 6

Captained by America's two 10-goal men, Stewart Iglehart, of New York, and Cecil Smith, of Texas, an all-star polo game will be played at the Potomac Park Field on Sunday, October 6, under auspices of the United States Polo Association.

Ranking stars of the game in this country will make up the opposing teams, Meadowbrook vs. Texas. Iglehart, considered by many to be the greatest polo player in the world today, has made an international reputation for himself. Smith is rated as the game's leading stylist.

Robert E. Strawbridge, jr., president of the Polo Association, a veteran player who has won the national title six times, more than any other player in action; Robert L. Gerry, jr., and his brother, Elbridge T. Gerry, of the famous Aknusti team, with handicaps of seven and eight goals respectively; J. Peter Grace, jr., of the Great Neck team, who has come rapidly to the front in recent games for his brilliant horsemanship; Michael G. Phipps, a veteran of international plays, rated at nine goals, and his fellow teammate on the famous Florida Gulfstream team, Winston F. C. Guest, also a nine goal man.

The teams are bringing 40 ponies and 24 grooms for the big match.

The Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes has given permission for the use of the polo field, and Park Commissioner Gillan is cooperating with every facility at his disposal. Stands to accomodate 10,000 spectators will be erected, and adequate parking space for cars will be roped off along the driveways.

Gen. George Marshall, Chief of Staff; Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, Chief of Cavalry; Gen. Briden and Gen. Devers, are members of the sponsoring committee.

Proceeds from the game, which has been arranged by the local committee of "Bundles for Britain," of which Mrs. George Angus Garrett is chairman, will go for relief work in England. The players, all of whom have participated in international games, particularly in England, are donating their play for the cause.

Wilson, Devitt Elevens Battle In Grid Opener

The whistle will blow for the first high school football game of the 1940 season in Washington today at 3:30 p. m. when Woodrow Wilson, the ugly duckling of interhigh competition last year, and Devitt Prep square off at the Presidents' stadium.

The Presidents, who failed to win an interhigh series game all last season, will have only four lettermen—all linemen—back.

Wilson fans will be seeing the veteran center, Joe Tanney, in a new role today. Coach Carl Heintel has made an end out of his rangy center.

With the veterans, Clif Haack and Frank Marsden, back at guards and Fred Leser at the tackle spot again, Heintel hopes to present a strong forward wall for an inexperienced set of backs who probably will average about 150 pounds.

The Gibson Grays 140-pound football team would like to arrange a game for Sunday. Call Falls Church 1300.

Mildred Burke On Wrestling Card Tonight

Mildred Burke, the champion of the feminine wrestlers, will seek her 365th straight victory tonight at Turner's Arena.

Miss Burke, who hails from Columbus, Ohio, and is trained and managed by Billy Wolfe, will meet Vilma Dean, blonde niece of the more famous Man Mountain Dean.

Sharing honors with the Burke-Dean title bout will be Danno O'Mahoney, the erstwhile world's champion, and Warren Bockwinkle, who will meet in a finish battle.

The popular two-man team match will be resumed tonight, with Chris and Babe Zaharias, meeting Herbie Freeman, the Jewish star, and Frank Judson, one-time wrestling coach at Harvard. The Zaharias boys, who hail from Pueblo, Colo., in their last appearance against Freeman and his pal, Sheriff Tom Hanley, won in handy fashion. Enraged, Freeman formed an alliance with Judson, hoping to gain revenge.

Miss Burke showed at the Arena a few weeks ago, turning back Betty Boster, of St. Louis.

Opening the card at 8:30 will be Henry Piers, the Flying Dutchman, and Paul Bosch, of Los Angeles.

A new referee, Moe Brazen, of Brooklyn, will assist Casey Berger in the refereeing duties.

C. U. Back Lost Most of Season

Francis Brosnihan, Catholic University reserve back, was discharged from Providence Hospital yesterday, but he probably will be lost to the Cardinal eleven the greater part of the season.

X-ray pictures revealed that Brosnihan, injured tackling a Maryland runner in a scrimmage Tuesday, did not have a fractured knee as had been feared. The Cardinal gridder is suffering two badly torn ligaments, internal and external, in his left knee.

Reinhart Warns G.W. Squad of Mounts' Speedy Left Tackle

Cheated out of a day's work in the open by yesterday's rains, Coach Bill Reinhart will take his George Washington football squad out today for a final touch of heavy work in preparation for tomorrow night's opening game in Griffith stadium with Mount St. Mary's.

The G. W. coach, however, didn't let rain interfere yesterday, but staged a workout in the Colonial gymnasium with linemen working on one end of the basketball court and the backs at the other.

Reinhart warned his line that they'll be up against a man who's reported to be one of the fastest linemen in Maryland in the Mounts' drill tomorrow and then rest until Capt. Ed Donahue, left tackle.

The Colonials will hold a brief the trek out to the ball park to fire the opening shot in the local college football season. Reinhart is expected to keep the team under wraps as much as possible tomorrow night.

5 Teams Tied In Six-Day Bicycle Race

The Red Devil French-Italian partnership of Alfred Letourner and Angelo DeBacco burned up the pine saucer at Riverside Stadium late last night as an enthusiastic crowd saw the riders complete the seventy-fifth hour of the international tix-day bicycle grind in a five-way tie for the lead.

The contestants setting the pace who had covered a total of 1,284 miles were Torchy Peden and Cesar Moretti, Heinz Vopel and Jules Audy, Gustav Kilian and Bill Anderson, George Shipman and Fred Ottevaere, and Letourner and DeBacco.

Archie Bollaert and Gerard DeBaets were trailing by but one lap; Ewald Wissel and Charley Yuccino by two laps, and Al Sellinger and Johnny Eiler by seven laps.

Letourner and DeBacco, hard riding daredevils who never let up, sent the fans into an uproar near the midnight hour when they lapped the field with a burst of speed that could not be denied. They were accorded a fine hand for their effort.

The most popular team in the race, the German-American partnership of handsome Gustav Kilian and youthful Bill Anderson, continued a drive that had enabled it to forge from last place into a leadership tie within a span of 24 hours.

Anderson, a hard working and sincere lad, was roundly applauded by the fans as he bolted around the track at breakneck speed while Kilian not only grabbed off his share of the laurels but also succeeded in exerting a remarkable steadying influence on Anderson.

Peden and Moretti continued their clock-like pace and appeared the freshest team in the race as the riders squared off in the early morning hours. Peden, the miracle man of six-day racing, was breathing easily and smiling confidently as he continued pedaling away with that miraculous stride that has enabled him to win more races than any other rider in the six day grind today.

Manor Club Sets Field Day Date

Manor Country Club's field day and stag party committee announced the annual stag day will be held Saturday, October 19, at the club.

Harry Pitt, golf committee chairman, will be in charge of the tournament program; Harry Whitlock, house committee chairman, will take charge of the dinner, while the entertainment will be under the capable Bill Jones.

More than 400 members and guests are expected to attend.

A field day is scheduled at Indian Spring on Wednesday, October 16.

Injuries Slow Terps' Work For Opener

Maryland Plays Host To Hampden-Sidney Saturday; Line Backfield Riddled

Maryland's three-man coaching staff was exuding large quantities of gloom yesterday as the growing injury list threw a hitch in their efforts to formulate a starting line-up for Saturday's opening game in College Park with Hampden-Sydney.

Only one note of cheer could be culled from the mass of reports on the Terapins' work to date. That is the surprising development of Frank Heyer, 184-pounder and the lightest guard on the team.

Heyers's blocking has won him a definite starting position and has aroused a spark of optimism on the coaching staff.

More and More Injuries

Leo Mueller, regular end, injured in the scrimmage with Catholic University, went to a hospital yesterday and will be out of Saturday's game, while Dick Shaffer, the other wingman, is on the shelf with a cracked rib.

The backfield situation was the cause for most gloom, however, as it developed that Mearle Duvall and Sophomore Jack Duvall both would be lost. The two were the choice as starting halfbacks. Duvall has an outside chance to play.

George Glenger, regular 1938 guard, is favoring a bruised side, but he may play briefly. The Terps will work today, and the starting line-up will be announced immediately afterward. Jimmy Dunn, junior halfback, and Bernie Ulman are expected to get the halfback starting roles, while Jack Mueller and Larry Mackenzie are the choices to fill the breach at the end positions.

Baer-Comiskey Bout Tonight Rated as Even

No Public Betting Choice Set for Heavyweight Clash

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 25.—The experienced fistic clowning of old Maxie Baer and the youth and hitting power of Irish Pat Comiskey collide in the ball park tomorrow night in the "bettingest" heavyweight fight around these parts in years.

Even those charitable souls, the betting commissioners, who would even lay 6 to 5, out and out on death and taxes, don't know which clouter to tab as favorite. Some odds makers have installed the 19-year-old Irish walloper on top at 5 to 7; others just reverse the procedure.

The chances are it'll be even money and "who d'ya like" when they climb into the ring about 9 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow—weather permitting—before a hoped-for crowd of 25,000. Promoter Jack Kearns, making his big league fistic comeback, figures the gate may be $100,000.

This corner, like a kid at the circus, goes for the clown in this one. Max appears to know too many answers to the questions Pat is still asking. A year from now, the big-jawed kid should be the toughest man around, but right now he has too much to learn, and Baer—say what you want about the way he can or cannot fight—knows more than one and one about the business of mashing noses. Of course, Pat may walk right out there, hang one on Baer's jaw and make Max curl up, but this doesn't figure.

On one point all are agreed. The fight is a cinch to end long before it goes the 15-round route, because both fellows pack a can of ether in their fists. Baer predicts he'll knock out Comiskey in four or five rounds. Pat's telling his friends he's going to let the former king of the playboys go through his routine of gags and patter for a couple of rounds, then flatten him in five or six.

Afterward, Comiskey has it all figured out to take half a dozen or so fights over the winter and be ready for Joe Louis next summer. Baer, too, has been feeding the folks his usual chatter about "knocking off this young punk" and going on from there to a second Louis set-together. But don't let him kid you about that. Mrs. B. already has turned thumbs down on any more tete-a-tetes with the Bomber.

Inclement Weather Postpones Trot Races

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 25 (INS).—A sodden track and frigid winds today caused postponement for the second day of the $9,000 Kentucky Futurity and all companion races on the Grand Circuit program.

The Futurity and the $3,000 Castleton Stakes, previously announced as indefinitely postponed, will feature a six-race program tomorrow, weather permitting, racing officials announced.

Rutgers' 195-Lb. Guard Is Fast as Rabbit

New Brunswick, N. J. Sept. 25 (AP).—Rutgers Football Coach Harvey Harman expects anything to happen now that he has a 195-pound guard fast enough to catch a rabbit.

Husky Bill Schmitt espied a wild rabbit scampering down the practice field, darted out of the line-up and after a 75-yard chase leaped on the bunny.

Navy Gridmen Drill on Muddy Field; Meet W.-M. Saturday

Light Scrimmage Held; Middies Aim for Invaders' Tricky Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25.—Navy's football forces today had their first opportunity to work out under unfavorable turf conditions. Heavy, intermittent showers that prevailed through the early hours, converted the field into a mire, and it gave the players their first real chance of handling a wet ball as well as getting the feel of soft underfooting, as eral weeks.

The squad, however, coped with the elements in good shape, fumbling or other faulty work being scant as the players went through their signal and formation drills, with emphasis placed on new plays. A light scrimmage against the shock troops topped off the practice session.

The Middies view the game with William and Mary College on Saturday which will open the local season, with more than ordinary interest, as the Indians, regardless of their 16-to-0 reverse at the hands of North Carolina State last Friday night, are tabbed as a tricky outfit, and with two stellar backs in Waldo Matthews and Johnny Korczowski, are calculated to give any team trouble. The Virginians are also reported to be strong in outside running plays. Matthews and Korczowski are said to be kickers of high caliber, so that there should be an excellent punting duel with Navy's Bill Busik, and Sherwood (Butch) Werner.

As Navy's season gets under way Saturday, prospects are encouraging. Admittedly the squad is probably the best in years, and the team that has been elected to start the game is considered stronger in ground work than that of last year, and is showing greater ability in the passing game, although there is room for much improvement defensively, in the latter respect, as demonstrated in the practice workout against Georgetown last Saturday.

Head Coach Maj. (Swede) Larson, and the Navy board of strategy will have more than the usual eagle eye on Saturday's battle, as the first major game with Princeton, at Princeton, is only two weeks removed. A victory over the Tigers would be a great boost to Navy's stock, especially in view of last year's debacle when the Jungaleers routed the Tars, 28 to 0.

Greek Jurist Registers Victory in Havre de Grace Feature

Aethelstan II Colt Scores By 2 Lengths

Henry A. Parr 3d's Juvenile Wins in First Start; Lynch Rides 2-Year-Old

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 28.—Seven eligibles for Laurel's Maryland Futurity matched their speed wares today in the best race on a featureless program, and Greek Jurist, owned by Henry A. Parr 3d, proved much the best of the lot. The good looking son of Aethelstan II and Fair Advocate splashed over the 6-furlong course to win with speed in reserve and by two lengths, a fine showing for a first time starter.

Jockey J. Lynch had the saddle assignment and had only to guide Greek Jurist, the colt being in front from flagfall to pay off time. The customers, some 6,000 hardy souls, made Greek Jurist the favorite and the mutuel of $5.40 was considered a fair return. The winner's time was 1:15 1-5 over a track that looked mighty like the Mississippi River at flood stage.

A betting oddity came in the fourth race. The field was scratched down to four horses and the crowd just about failed to make a favorite. With the tote locked, all horses were 5 to 2 on the odds board. In fact, $207 was the largest difference in the wagering between any two horses. The winner, Morstep, was the longest shot in the field and paid a mere $7.40. Dizzy Dame was second, landing a photo for place from Graeme Cracker. Morstep won by four lengths while pulled up.

The daily double paid $100.70. Mrs. E. Shropshire's Charlie's Lady, making the second start of her career, jogged home ahead of Wire Me and Misprint to bring her individual backers a $6.10 mutuel. This was the first of two winners on the program for Jockey Bobby Merritt. The second event went to Mrs. F. W. Bond's Kaptime, piloted by Jockey Eddie DeCamillis. Pont Neuf was second and unable to resist the closing bid of the winner, while Maroc was third. Kaptime paid $20.80 in his own right.

Merritt's second winner was aboard the MacThorn Farm's Blazing Heat, the favorite, in the fifth race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEK JURIST, $5.40, $3.50, $3.10; JOHN'S STAR, $7.10, $3.80; WISE BRAVE, $3.00.
GREEK JURIST assumed command at once, led way with ease and won with something in reserve. JOHN'S STAR was hard ridden and showed good effort while closing willingly. WISE BRAVE was rated while in close quarters early, responded when shaken up and closed gamely. LER-LAIN raced wide from beginning and was held safe.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, SLOPPY.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:55½. Off 3:56. Winner, H. Z. Isaacs' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORSTEP, $7.40, $3.60, out; DIZZY DAME, $3.20, out; GRAEME CRACKER, out.
MORSTEP took lead at once, drew out and won with speed in reserve. DIZZY DAME was well placed from start, responded when shaken up and closed gamely, but was no match for winner. GRAEME CRACKER was closest to MORSTEP'S pace to midstretch and weakened when placed to punishment. MICHIGAN FLYER did not appear to fancy going.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:25. Off 4:25½. Winner, Mac Thorn Farm's b. f. (4), by Big Blaze—Assembly. Trained by D. C. Harrison. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOWARD, $9.30, $4.40, $3.90; SEALOCH, $5.80, $4.60; BRIGHT GEM, $15.10.
HOWARD, steadied while within striking distance to backstretch, moved up when asked, took command and held sway thereafter under drive. SEALOCH, very slow to get under way, went to contention with rush and reserved behind leader in stretch rush. BRIGHT GEM took lead over BUBBLEWORTH when called upon and faltered after losing command. PLAYMORE was well placed to stretch and tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:26½. Off 5:27½. Winner, M. Madden's br. m. Roy Smith Captures District Public Links Championship

Diminutive Player Beats D. Jennings

115-Pounder Scores 4 and 3 Victory; Match Is Halted Because of Rain

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Roy Smith, a 115-pound slugger fro mSpartanburg, S. C., kept his putter hot through an all-day rain to win the District Public Links championship yesterday over Dick Jennings, a G. W. law student from Waco, Tex.

Smith, a Labor Department employe who has been playing golf here for a year and a half, one-putted 17 out of 33 greens as he defeated Jennings, who saw the East Potomac course for the first time this spring, 4 and 3.

Both boys are former champions of their respective home towns, Smith a three-time titlist in Spartanburg, while Jennings won the Waco title on two occasions. Smith was runner-up in the State high school championship in 1928 and 1929.

Match Is Stopped

The finalists started in the rain at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, but had to quit on the fifteenth when the rain and wind made play virtually impossible. They were all even at the time. After hanging around the clubhouse for nearly three hours, they went back out to the fifteenth tee in the midst of the downpour, and Smith scrambled to three straight pars and a three-up lead at the halfway mark.

By this time the sun was peeping through, so they continued on to the afternoon 18, and it was Smith all the way. He went five up at the twenty-sixth hole, Jennings won the twenty-seventh with a birdie three and they halved six straight holes on the back nine in pars and the match was over on the fifteenth, or thirty-third, hole.

Smith, who also holds the East Potomac Spring Tournament title, succeeds Andy Oliveri as city muny champion. Oliveri lost to Jennings in the semifinals in the biggest upset among the pay-as-you-play boys in many years. Oliveri turned over the S. G. Leoffler Trophy for a year.

The new champion dropped only one birdie in the 33 holes of the match, while Jennings had three, but Smith was there time and again with one-putts for pars. Smith, who hits the ball almost unbelievable distances for his 115 pounds, was up with the long-hitting Jennings all day.

Jennings Wins Fourteenth

The runner-up was ahead but once and then for only one hole. After turning the first nine eveh in the morning Jennings won the fourteenth with a par but Smith won the next and then they were forced to suspend play.

Smith was seven over par for the 33 holes, while Jennings was ten over for the route. The former posted a pair of 38s for a 76 in the morning was out in 39 in the afternoon and then had par for a 36 when the match was over. Jennings was 79 in the morning, out in 40, and also had par for a 3, on the last nine.

Although he one-putted 17 greens, Smith's putts were mostly between 5 and 10 footers. His longest was a 20-footer on the thirty-second hole that stopped when it appeared to be a brief rally on the part of the loser. Hennings one-putted ten greens.

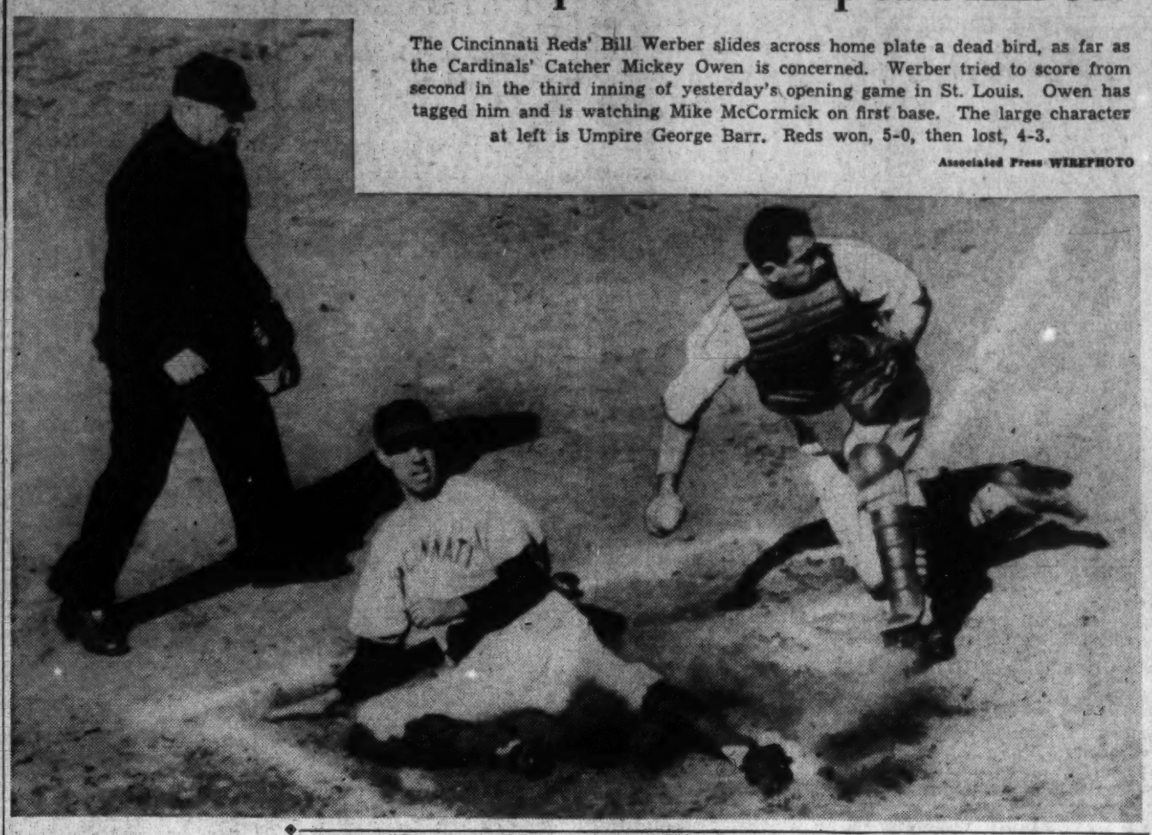
Bill Werber Wears Woeful Exp ression as Ump Calls Him Out



The Cincinnati Reds' Bill Werber slides across home plate a dead bird, as far as the Cardinals' Catcher Mickey Owen is concerned. Werber tried to score from second in the third inning of yesterday's opening game in St. Louis. Owen has tagged him and is watching Mike McCormick on first base. The large character at left is Umpire George Barr. Reds won, 5-0, then lost, 4-3.

Brothers Star As Reds Split With Cards

Morton, Walter Cooper Form Winning Battery; Champs Bow in Opener

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 25.—A brother battery of Morton Cooper pitching and Rookie Walter Cooper behind the plate helped the Cardinals defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3, in the second game of a double-header today after the National League champions had won the first game, 5 to 0, on Junior Thompson's 2-hitter. Bucky Walters lost the nightcap.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

(This is the second of a series of three articles on conscription, as it effects athletes, and a preview of the athletic programs planned for troop camps.)

With the exception of a few jockeys and men of the voluptuous contours of Blimp Phelps, of the Dodgers, and Jumbo Brown, of that sad mockery called the Giants, athletes who are single and have no dependents will be much desired when the Selective Service Commission begins packing men off to camps next month.

CONSIDINE

You have to be a pretty good man to get in the Army today. You won't have to be too much of a man to be measured for a uniform when conscription starts. For instance, the Army now turns down any would-be enlistment if the applicant is less than 5 feet 4 inches. When the first peacetime draft sweeps the country it will take men down to 5 feet in height and 107 pounds in weight.

But it still wants good men, and more than one draft officer is looking fondly at the thousands of United States athletes who are within the draft age. Some officers remember that the sports world did not exactly cover itself with glory in the World War enlistment and drafting periods.

There will be no opportunity this time for the boys or their managers and employers to throw up a screen of red tape. Draft officials want able-bodied men, and favor athletes because they have the timing, reflexes, strength and sense of teamplay that makes good soldiers.

The officials realize, too, that a camp that is athletic will take more readily to military training, and will be in better shape to stand the grind. Lieut. Col. John B. Spruit, who is lining up the physical specifications of the average American soldier, said yesterday that "in due time" the conscripted men must demonstrate that they can march from 15 to 20 miles daily with a 50-pound pack on their backs. As for their ears and eyesight to be drafted they must be able to see and hear enough "to get around." In other words they must meet the minimum vision requirements without glasses.

Lieut. Col. Spruit, who looks fit enough to run any prize athlete into the ground in a military endurance test, says that the 1940 male is a better specimen than the 1917 male. "All that money spent in health clinics, playgrounds and sports facilities has had a definite effect on the average young man," he asserts.

Ball players, who are chronic tobacco chewers, will be interested to learn that to be drafted a man must have at least 12 teeth that meet. He must have three biting teeth, upper and lower, and three "chawin'" teeth.

As if anticipating the same rash of excuses which many able-bodied professional athletes of the last war invented to escape service, draft officials have devised elaborate and intricate methods of catching phonies. The officials refused to reveal any of these methods.

Lieut. Col. Spruit said that fat men within the age limits would not automatically be placed on the deferred list, but that it would be up to the examining doctors. He differentiated between "fat in bunches" and "evenly distributed" fat. He wants athletic types. He used a homely analogy to amplify that want. "When a farmer puts apples in storage for the winter he uses only the best ones for that purpose," he said. "We're not training for war. We're training to be ready if it comes. The men who serve through the first year of the draft will in effect be put in storage after that, and we want good ones so they'll 'keep.'"

In the World War men were drafted who were not physically able to lead an active life in the field. They were used in clerical and semiprofessional capacities. For the first year, at least, there will be none of this, this time. Flat feet, prevalent in sports, won't necessarily be a cause for exemption, but beyond that the authorities won't waste much time for unsound citizens. They aren't looking upon the draft just now as a "corrective" measure. They believe that it is up to the defective man, or his community, to get himself in shape—so that he will be available for later service.

We hear of such feats of athletic stamina as Feller's pitching after a one or two-day rest, or McNeill winning the tennis title from Riggs after losing the first two sets, or 60-minute football players. We wonder how many famous athletes today could hike 20 miles with a 50-pound pack? The officials, of course, say that this will be a task demanded "in due time." They know that if anybody can lick that problem quickly it is a man who is conversant with sports, for he has long since mastered his muscles. And for that reason it is expected that the athlete of 1940 will be hastily inducted into training camps, whereas his brother of 1917 did his best to pass the buck, or have it passed for him.

18 Teams Play In Maryland Golf Tourney

Baltimore and Washington clubs each entered nine teams in the Maryland State Golf Association team championship that starts Sunday on eight courses. Two Baltimore clubs drew first round byes.

Indian Spring's defending champions travel to Bonnie View, while last year's finalists, Terra Mariae, will entertain George Diffenbaugh's Kenwood line-up.

The all-Washington feature will be Beaver Dam at Congressional. Teams will, as usual, consist of 11 amateurs and the club professional. Captains must submit line-ups before the matches.

Sunday's pairings:

Upper Half
Rolling Road vs. bye; Woodholme at Woodmont; Hillendale at Elkridge; Indian Spring at Bonnie View; Argyle at Capital.

Lower Half
Beaver Dam at Congressional; Kenwood at Terra Mariae; Manor at Suburban; Green Spring Valley at Chevy Chase; Baltimore C. C. vs. bye.

Eagle Hockey Coach Arrives

Redvers Mackenzie, popular coach of the Washington Eagles, who piloted the local ice birds to a second-place finish in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League last season, reported here yesterday.

Mackenzie immediately contacted Owner Severine G. Leoffler, sr., of the Eagles, and started mapping out plans for the season ahead.

Mackenzie and Leoffler are to depart for New York Friday and will attend an Eastern League meeting Friday night. There, it is believed, the present set-up of Eastern League clubs—Washington, Baltimore, New York, Atlantic City and River Vale—may be joined by another strong amateur team, probably Boston.

Brooke Grubb Holds Field Day Sunday

A field day will be held Sunday at Brooke Grubb's golf range, about 2 miles north of Silver Spring. Two softball games, the first starting at 1 o'clock, an all-day driving contest, putting and chip contest, mule race and turtle race are also on the card. Refreshments will be served.

Budge, Nogrady In Pro Semifinals

Chicago, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., and John Nogrady, of Montclair, N. J., today advanced to the semifinals of the national professional tennis tournament.

Budge defeated Walter Senior, Louisville, Ky., 6—1, 6—3, 6—1, while Nogrady was whipping Karel Kozeluh, of Greenwich, Conn., 6—4, 6—0. Kozeluh, who suffered a wrenched knee when he fell during the first set, was forced to default the third set.

Ray George, Eagle Gridder, Decides to Quit

Philadelphia, Sept. 25 (AP).—Ray George, tackle for the Philadelphia Eagles, has quit professional football.

President Bert Bell announced today he had received a letter from George saying, "I have lost interest in playing football, so I figure I might as well give it up."

George, who formerly played for Southern California and the Detroit Lions, is believed en route to his home in Los Angeles.

James F. O'Hara Hurt in Auto Crash

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—James F. O'Hara, jr., 35, part owner of the Bowie Race Track and prominent in racing circles, was injured seriously tonight in a collision between his automobile and a trolley.

At the hospital, where O'Hara was taken, physicians said he suffered broken ribs, facial lacerations and a possible broken nose and wrist.

Baltimore Woman Sets Fishing Record

Bermuda, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Two world fishing records were set in Bermuda waters today, one by a beginner and the other by a veteran sportsman.

Mrs. John Radway, of Baltimore, Md., went deep sea fishing for the first time and caught a 127½-pound wahoo on heavy tackle. I local fisherman, Parjoe Soares, set the other record for the largest catch with a total take of 27 fish, whose total weight went over 1,000 pounds.

Gerb's 418 Set Paces Bowling In D. C. League

Smith Leads Brookland Rollers to 2-1 Victory Over Clarendon

El Gerb, with a set of 418 paced Lucky Strike in taking two out of three games from Hyattsville in the District Bowling League last night as he combined with his mates for a high 1838 set.

Leonard Smith paced Brookland to a 2-to-1 victory over Clarendon, despite a 148 game and a 384 set by Joe Freschi for the losers.

Georgetown took a 2-to-1 decision from Defending Champion Rosslyn as Monk Walker led with a 144 game and 392 set.

In other matches played throughout the city Lafayette took the odd game from Chevy Chase. Convention Hall won, 2-1, over Penn Recreation, and Arcadia swept three games from King Pin. Ernie Hauser and Astor Clarke rolled 152 and 153 high games and 414 and 407 high sets, respectively for Lafayette.

The Office Appliance League bowled its second session last night at Chevy Chase Ice Palace with Samperton, Royal No. 1, and Marquette, Procurement, gathering individual glory with high game and set of 138 and 384, respectively. I. B. M., No. 1, was the only quintet to smother opponents in all three games, taking them from L. C. Smith.

The Bureau of Standards had their third session last night at Chevy Chase with Bill Caul, Chemists, and Eddie Upperman, Office, splitting high individual game honors with 145 each, while the latter took high individual set laurels with 388. The Chemists mixed a deadly brew for the other quintets and won high team game and set with 611, 1,692. Harvey Lanier, Office, is official scorer for the Standards.

Columbia

The Ordnance Department Duckpin League met at Columbia alleys last night with J. Walker, Antiaircraft, and L. M. Church, Range Finders, taking individual honors with high game and set of 130 and 360, respectively. The Boosters team took high game with 504, while the Howitzers won high team set with 1,469.

California Loses Services Of Back for Wolverine Clash

Key Position Player Injured in Scrimmage; Michigan Board Planes for Game Trip

By the Associated Press

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 25.—California's slender hopes of winning the opening football game against the University of Michigan were bruised badly today by a scrimmage while the Wolverines were still 2,000 miles away.

The key position in the Bear offensive of right halfback was cut down to a lone second string man by injuries while California prepared, none too hopefully, for her first intersectional curtain raiser in years.

The Bears went through scrimmage today while the Wolverines were boarding three planes in

Headley Urges Simplifying Of Trust Laws

Capital Fiduciaries Group Hears A. B. A. Council Member

Major trends in the trust field were discussed at a dinner meeting last night of the fiduciaries section of the District Bankers Association in the Mayflower Hotel. Guest speaker was Louis S. Headley, of St. Paul, Minn., who told of the work of the American Bankers Association toward simplification of fiduciary legislation in the various States.

MR. HEADLEY

Mr. Headley, nationally known in the trust field and vice president of the First Trust Co. of St. Paul, is a member of the executive council of the trust division of the A. B. A. He came here from the bankers' convention in Atlantic City expressly to make the talk. Harold A. Kertz, assistant trust officer of the National Metropolitan Bank and new chairman of the fiduciaries section, presided at last night's meeting.

Insurance Group Meets

More than 100 members of the Insurance Club of Washington heard Wellington Potter, Rochester insurance man, at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Lee-Sheridan Hotel. Albert F. Jordan and Charles E. Conner, superintendent and deputy superintendent of insurance in the District of Columbia, yesterday were guests. The group consists of agents of fire and casualty companies here.

2% Treasury Issue

Secretary Morgenthau has announced the offering through the Federal Reserve Banks of 2 per cent Treasury bonds of 1953-'55, in exchange for 1½ per cent Treasury notes of series C-1940, maturing December 15, 1940. Exchanges will be made par for par.

Safe Deposit Committees

Committees for the coming year were announced last night at a meeting of the safe deposit section of the District Bankers Association in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co. As reported by Miss Eva Ricker, chairman, they are:

Standardized Forms—Albert E. Fisher, (chairman), Riggs National Bank; Mrs. Mabel Davis, Arlington Trust Co.; G. Crrwford Turnbull, Morris Plan Bank; Charles W. Haas, Union Trust Co. and Mrs. Gladys Morris, Bank of Commerce & Savings.

Standardized Practices—Miss Elizabeth Churchill (chairman), Union Trust Co.; Earle F. Turner, National Bank of Washington; Mrs. Scheuch, Hamilton National Bank; C. C. Boswell, American Security & Trust Co., and Charles K. West, Security Savings & Commercial Bank.

Publicity and Education—Richard E. Harris (chairman), American Security & Trust Co.; Mrs. Margaret Fischer, Hamilton National Bank, and William Curtis Cooper, Liberty National Bank.

Program—William McClure (chairman), McLachlen Banking Corporation; Hans W. Ireland, American Security & Trust Co.; Mrs. Florence Warner, Riggs National Bank; Mr. Elgin, City Bank, and Miss Kathryn Fout, Hamilton National Bank.

Deficit Financing Perils U. S., Bankers Told; Giannini Assails Government 'Satellites'

Defense Crisis Stirs Sober Appraisal of Debt, Says Hanes

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 25.—"Insolvency is the time bomb which can eventually destroy the American system," Robert M. Hanes, president of the American Bankers Association, said today, charging that "the evangelists of the new social order are undermining the confidence of the American people in political and economic freedom."

Hanes, president of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston-Salem, N. C., addressed the third session of the association's convention, where 4,000 bankers from all parts of the United States are in attendance.

"This emergency of defense," Hanes said, "may well have within it the stern realities which will help the American people to appraise soberly some of the policies which we have been blindly following."

Accepted as Policy

Asserting no country can achieve military defense unless it is economically prepared, Hanes said:

"It is a matter of grave concern that we have come to accept deficit financing as a permanent fiscal policy. We not only proceed from year to year on an unbalanced Federal budget but we have permitted the compounding of the Federal debt to a huge total which threatens the entire economy.

"We are willing to take the road of sacrifice and hard work. As a nation we have indicated our willingness to pay for the larger part of the national defense program by increased taxation. Against this process there is no significant protest.

"But unless we put an end to deficit financing, to profligate spending and to indifference to the nature and extent of Government borrowing, we shall surely take the road to dictatorship."

"By subtle propaganda, special pleading and similar devious devices," Hanes said, "the American people have been persuaded to surrender more and more of their independence to the direction and control of government. This is an evil that feeds upon itself."

Cites Tax Boosts

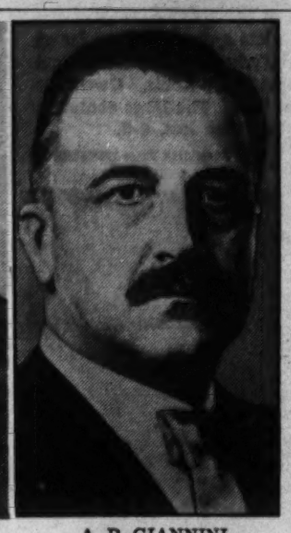
Deficits and borrowings call for continually larger taxation, which must be met by private enterprise, Hanes said.

"American industry and agriculture—privately owned, privately financed and privately operated—give employment to the workers and savers on whom taxation must ultimately rest. The misrepresentation, neglect or abuse of that enterprise or any fundamental threat to its solvency is as much a barrier to national defense as is the philosophy of the totalitarian state."

"Preparedness means the reassertion of our independence and consequently of our responsibility as American citizens.

"No more convincing proof could be given of the good faith of our Government than the willingness to arm as far as possible through private industry and private finance . . . As Americans we have the right to insist that the arms program be accomplished in the American way."

ROBERT M. HANES



A. P. GIANNINI

Coast Financier Ired; His Candidate for A. B. A. Post Quits

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 25.—A. P. Giannini, West Coast banker, charged today "satellites" of the Federal Government had moved to block his candidate for high office in the American Bankers Association.

At the same time, Russell G. Smith, executive vice president of the Bank of America, Giannini's San Francisco institution, withdrew his name from consideration by the nominating committee for second vice president of the association. The second vice president, by custom, will become the president two years hence.

Giannini, in a statement, said:

"I do not know what prompted his (Smith's) withdrawal of his name, but I do know that certain sycophantic satellites of the most arbitrary and bureaucratic departments of the Federal Government have been perniciously active lest the bank of which Mr. Smith is a high officer and which is linked with my name, be given appropriate recognition."

Smith's withdrawal left a clear field to W. L. Hemingway, president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. of St. Louis, who was backed by a faction of which Tom K. Smith, St. Louis banker, former president of the association and a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, was said to be the leader.

Giannini has recently been at odds with the Comptroller of the Currency and the Securities and Exchange Commission over affairs of the Bank of America and Transamerica Corporation, a holding concern with which he is identified.

The Comptroller of the Currency recently forced Bank of America to increase its capital by $30,000,000 and to change certain methods of valuing its assets.

General List Continues to Resist Pressure; Specialties, Notably Preferreds, in Demand

New York, Sept. 25.—Resistance to pressure is being displayed by the stock market. The composite average showed a negligible decline today, amounting to only 0.03 point, which means that after its run of eight days of advance the list has had two days of minor adjustment. The average still is within striking distance of its high for the move. Trading dwindled as the irregularity developed and the day's volume was only 663,960 shares.

A few special issues, notably some of the preferreds, continued in favor and made good gains. There was little incentive for shoving the main body of the list along, however. The chief reason for caution is the same as it has been for weeks, namely the uncertainty over the war. With the struggle spreading to French West Africa and approaching French Indo-China, and a pact between Germany and Japan becoming a probability, there are few traders sanguine enough on the prospects facing this country to cast aside discretion.

Business figures continued to give no reasons for complaint but operations near the capacity level will not necessarily mean profits which are commensurate and conditions facing us in international trade can shift quickly with half the world at war.

Trade news contributed today was favorable for most items. They may have contributed to the steadiness of the market but they could not offset the war as the prime factor in Wall Street's business.

Steels, motors and metals were the most active stocks in today's trading. Rails edged slightly lower and some of the aviations were called upon to meet profit taking Douglas, however, was strong, adding more than a point, Steel, Bethlehem and Republic, held near their former prices. Kennecott gained a major fraction and small advances were scored by Anaconda, Inspiration and American Zinc. Higher metal prices have brought greater activity to these issues. Graham Paige was the day's most active stock as far as share turnover is concerned but the money involved in its transactions naturally was small.

A feature of recent days has been the attention paid to preferred issues which normally are inactive. This search for sleepers continued today, while the balance of the list was irregular. A few of the noteworthy gains included Mullins preferred, up 5¼; Alleghany prior preferred, up 2½; General Steel Casting preferred, up 2½; C. C. C. & St. Louis preferred, up 2; Schenley preferred, up 2⅛, and Foster Wheeler preferred, up 3.

Although trading in listed bonds was slow, the counter market had an unusually active day, owing to the Treasury refinancing of $737,000,000 notes and the rapid distribution of the new issue of $30,000,000 Southern California Gas Co. bonds. Formal turnover was only $6,490,000, with gains and losses about equally numerous. United States Treasury bonds were marked slightly higher. While best grade corporates were well maintained. The speculative groups reflected the same sort of uncertainty apparent in the equities market.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Wheat nudged upward fractionally during the last hour of trading today to the best price level in almost three months.

The advance in the final hour reflected a strong rally in stocks after noon, some improvement in flour business and diminishing supplies of "free" wheat in commercial channels due to the producer holding policy. Comparatively light trading proved to be enough to influence the market inasmuch as most dealers continued to exercise extreme caution because of the threatening international situation.

July, 1941, contracts, representing the new crop, lagged behind, but at the close prices were ⅛ lower to ½ higher, December, 80@79⅞; May, 80¼. It was the first time December wheat has sold at 80 cents since early in July. The season's high was $1.10½ and the low 66¾.

Corn closed ¼@⅜ higher, December, 58¼@58⅜; May, 59½@59⅝; oats, 1@1⅛ higher; soybeans, 1@1½ lower; rye, ¾@1 cent up, and lard, 3 lower to 5 higher.

Scattered frost was forecast for Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Iowa, but the Government reported that from the Ohio Valley East much of the crop is safe while corn is practically "made" in Missouri. About 75 per cent of the Illinois crop, more than 80 per cent of the Iowa crop and practically all the Minnesota acreage is safe from frost. Some damage has been done in Northwest Iowa.

Lard firmed with hogs and grains.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 25 (AP).—(United State Department of Agriculture).—The persistent demand and strengthening prices for fine wools on the Boston market caused users today to turn to coarser wools.

Combing three-eighths blood territory wools have moved in fair weight at 78 to 82 cents, scoured basis. Fine territory wools continued to sell at strong prices. Graded fine territory wools have brought 86 to 93 cents, scoured basis, for French combing length and around 95 cents, scoured basis, for lots containing staple and good French combing lengths together.

London Stocks

Selling remained negligible and a steady trickle of small buying raised prices.

Government bonds attracted support, rising as much as ¼ point. Japanese bonds also were up.

Interest broadened in the industrial group with building, store and provision issues most favored. Strong support developed for kaffirs. Brewery stocks lagged at slightly lower prices.

Domestic rails shifted unevenly. Coppers were neglected.

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Cotton futures added 4 to 6 points today to the advance under way for nearly two weeks.

Hedge offerings failed to appear in large proportion. Recent rains in the central belt led to fears the present slow crop movement might be retarded even more.

A 10-point reaction in early trade on selling attracted by starting gains was soon recovered.

In later dealings a pickup in trade and local demand revealed a scarcity of contracts, which was quickly reflected in higher prices. Final quotations were tops for the session.

Exports Tuesday, 926 bales; season so far, 126,326; port receipts, 8,362; port stocks, 2,797,000.

The Screen Guild Theater programs which start up again over WJSV and the Columbia Network this Sunday (at 7:30 p. m.) are unique in that, despite the fact that Hollywood's most popular actors take part in them, they get not one cent for their efforts.

If the pick of the crop of Hollywoodians who do take part were to get their regular fees, the Screen Guild Show would be easily the most expensive radio production ever. But as it is, the sponsor, the Gulf Oil Co., merely turns over a sizeable sum each week to the Motion Picture Relief Fund and everybody taking part in the show—and this includes writers, producers and technicians as well as actors—contributes his services.

The Motion Picture Relief Fund is using the money it gathers from the sponsor for the building of a home for the aged and needy of the film colony.

The premiere program this Sunday is to have Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart and Frank Morgan in a radio adaptation of their recent movie, "The Shop Around the Corner." Norman Corwin, Columbia's brilliant young director, has prepared the script and will be in charge of the production.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — She'll Make the Bucket Brigade — BY MILTON CANIFF

I'VE KNOWN SOME CONCEITED WOMEN, BUT YOU ARE THE LAST GURGLE OF EGOTISM!
... WHY QUIBBLE ABOUT A CERTAINTY? ... BUT COME, THERE ARE IMPORTANT MATTERS TO CONSIDER...
... I CAN SEE THAT THE FISHERMEN HAVE BEEN AT WORK ON THE MOTOR BOAT!... THEY PREPARE OUR MEANS OF ESCAPE!
BUT THEY MUST HAVE SENT WORD TO THE INVADER ARMY THAT WE ARE HERE... PERHAPS RYAN AND HIS FRIENDS INTERCEPTED THE MESSENGER!
PERHAPS!
...BUT IF THEY SEND ANOTHER COURIER— AND THE SOLDIERS COME BEFORE WE GET AWAY...
HU SHEE AND THE DRAGON LADY WOULD PROBABLY BE KILLED BY TORTURE... THEY WOULD BE LENIENT WITH YOU... POSSIBLY MAKE YOU A SCRUB WOMAN IN SOLDIERS' BARRACKS IN MANCHURIA!
MILTON CANIFF

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

GRAN'MA! THE LADY'S BEEN TRYIN' TO GIVE YOU YOUR CHANGE FOR TEN MINUTES!
OH, I'M SORRY.. I... I WAS THINKING!
IT'S TAKING SO LONG TO GET HOME! I MUSTN'T FRIGHTEN THE CHILDREN.. BUT I'M TERRIBLY UNEASY ABOUT THAT TRAMP! HE SAID SOME VERY STRANGE THINGS!
I GUESS I'M GETTING TO BE A FUSS-BUDGET IN MY OLD AGE! EVERYTHING SEEMS TO BE JUST THE WAY WE LEFT IT!
YOU!
QUITE SO! WON'T YOU COME IN, MRS. WORTH?
-DALE

DONALD DUCK — Oink—Oink—Oink! — BY WALT DISNEY

MICKEY FINN — The Low Down! — BY LANK LEONARD

YOU MEAN TO SAY THAT INSPECTOR KLIPP MADE MICHAEL FIGHT BIFF BRENNER, THE HEAVYWEIGHT BOXER, TO PROVE HE WAS TOUGH ENOUGH FOR KLIPP'S SQUAD?
YES, PHILIP! I'M AFRAID THE INSPECTOR IS ALL THAT SERGEANT HALLIGAN SAID HE WAS—AND MORE!
HELLO, MICKEY—I READ IN BUSKIN'S COLUMN THAT YOU KNOCKED OUT BIFF BRENNER YESTERDAY! HOW COME YOU DIDN'T TIP ME OFF ABOUT IT?
LISTEN, GABBY— I'LL TELL YOU THE WHOLE STORY—AND THEN YOU'LL UNDERSTAND!
—SO YOU SEE, GABBY, INSPECTOR KLIPP IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WHOLE THING —GEE—HE SURE IS A TOUGH MAN!
HE'S NOT SO TOUGH, MICKEY! WHEN THERE'S A REAL TOUGH GUY TO BE PINCHED HE LETS JOHNNY BIFFALICK OR SOME OTHER MEMBER OF THE SQUAD TAKE ALL THE RISKS!
HE DOES?
SURE—AND THEN HE TAKES ALL THE BOWS! HE'S A PHONEY, MICKEY— AND SOMEDAY YOU'LL FIND IT OUT!

DIXIE DUGAN — Steady Girls! — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

AFTER A BAD NIGHT'S SLEEP—
HE'S RIGHT! THIS VALLEY IS MAKING US OLD! I'VE GOT TWO MORE LINES IN MY FACE SINCE YESTERDAY!!
NO WONDER! YOU HAVEN'T CLOSED AN EYE—
OLD AGE HAS ITS REWARDS
AS A MATTER OF FACT, NEITHER HAVE I!
GOOD MORNING!
H'LO!
I'VE COME TO ACQUAINT YOU WITH OLD AGE —COME!
(GULP)— HERE IT IS!!
STEADY!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Under the Beam — BY FRANK MARTINEK

ONE SECOND, MASTER. WHILE I GET THESE HEAVY CHAINS AND WEIGHTS IN PLACE
OKAY— HE'LL SINK NOW LIKE A TON OF—
?!!
THE HARBOR POLICE! THEY'RE AFTER US!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

ALL HIGHEST! PLEASE! YOU HAVE BLUNDERED BADLY IN CONFIDING YOUR PLANS TO THIS HALF-CASTE DANCING GIRL!
PERHAPS! BUT SHE IS ALSO DEVOTED TO THE AMERICAN INDIAN, WAHOO! AND SHE WILL LOSE NO TIME TELLING HIM HOW HE IS TO DIE IN YOUR PLACE TOMORROW!
TUT, TUT! NETAH IS LOYAL TO ME, TORRO!
SUPPOSE HE REFUSES TO DOUBLE FOR YOU ON THE BALCONY WHEN THE NEW TAXES ARE BEING ANNOUNCED!
DEAR, DEAR! THEN I SHOULD HAVE TO APPEAR —AND BE ASSASSINATED!
PRECISELY! GIVE ORDERS AT ONCE TO HAVE WAHOO LOCKED IN THE DUNGEON— WHERE THIS WENCH CANNOT GET WORD TO HIM!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

ARE YOU CRANE, THE MINE BOSS?
GEE—HE MUST BE SEVEN FEET TALL!
YEAH, SERGEANT KING! AN' I WANT MY ENGINEER RELEASED! THAT INDIAN HE SHOT WAS TRESPASSIN'!
YOU'RE UNDER ARREST ON SUSPICION OF USING INDIAN SLAVE LABOR IN YOUR MINE!
